LAWYERS FOR WHITE'S SLAYER MAKE SUDDEN CHANGE OF TACTICS

SECRET MOVE BY DEFENSE TO SAVE THAW

"I Was Married to Mr. Thaw While Abroad." —EVELYN NESBIT THAW.

Another Recent Photograph of Woman for Whom Thaw Killed White.

Resolve at Last Moment Not to Withdraw Plea of Not Guilty and Prisoner Remains in Tombs—Thaw's Mother Hears of Tragedy.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

NEW YORK, July 3. Much mystery surrounds the action of Harry Kendall Thaw's lawyers, who, just before court opened to-day, abandoned their intention of having their client in court and making certain motions in connection with the case which they were not prepared to introduce at the first arraignment.

Thaw expected to appear and his plea of not guilty to the murder of Stanford White was to have been withdrawn so that the motions could be made. It is believed that this unexpected action on the part of the lawyers for the defence was taken to veil from the county prosecutor certain secret moves in the young millionaire's behalf that are under contemplation.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw made an early visit to her husband in the Tombs to-day. She reached the prison at 10:20 and waited ten minutes until she could, under the rules, be taken into the corridor. She was searched as usual. She and Thaw greeted each other affectionately at the barred entrance to the tier in which his cell is located and engaged in an earnest talk.

TO SHOW MARRIAGE PROOF.

Later Mrs. Thaw denied emphatically the story alleged to have been told by Bedford, the valet, that she and Thaw were not married abroad. She said they were married abroad and that she would produce the proof at the trial.

Believing that the health of his client would be seriously impaired if he were kept in the Tombs all Summer, Judge Olcott will ask that the trial of the young millionaire be set for an early date—the earlier the better.

"I will die if I have to stay in this prison three months longer," Thaw declared to his counsel.

District Attorney Jerome had previously announced the case would not be put on the calendar for trial before October, and it was this announcement that caused the prisoner to plead with his counsel to have the trial set for an earlier date.

TO ASK EARLY TRIAL.

Judge Olcott to-day said:

"I shall make as strong a plea as I can for an early trial. We are ready to make the fight now at any time. Mr. Thaw is suffering greatly from his close confinement. His health, I believe, will be seriously impaired if he is compelled to stay there much longer. Thaw himself is eager to face a jury and meet the issue."

THAW'S MOTHER IS TOLD OF TRAGEDY

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 3. Mrs. Mary Thaw, the mother of Harry Kendall Thaw, reached London this afternoon, in company with her son-in-law, the Earl of Yarmouth. They went to the West End Hotel in a motor, where the Countess awaited her mother to break the news of the New York tragedy.

The Countess and her mother had an affectionate meeting, after which the young woman told her mother about the terrible plight of Harry Thaw. While Mrs. Thaw was shocked by the blow she did not lose her composure. She did not weep, become hysterical or faint.

One member of the family, seen by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, said:

"Mrs. Thaw, like all of us, have known for a long time that Harry's sanity was questionable. We did not think, however, that he was so unbalanced as to cause him to do any violence.

"We did not dream that he was dangerous or needed to be kept under restraint.

"Harry's mother always feared that something would happen. Just what she did not know, of course. BBut she had a premonition that something would happen, and the news of the tragedy did not upset her as much as might have been expected.

"Mrs. Thaw expressed a desire to return to New York at once, but we convinced her that it would not be necessary, so she will remain here with the family for some time."

SLAM JULY 4 "LID" "OFF AGAIN, ON AGAIN"

ALDERMEN, MAYOR AND O'MEARA TAKE TURNS IN MANIPULATING IT.

The Fourth of July "lid" is "on again" pro tem.

One remembers Finnegan, the railroad yardmaster, who was called down by the division superintendent for writing a long report about a wreck. "Make your report short," wired back the super. The next train that went off the track was put back on again by the energetic Finnegan, who then reported succinctly:

"Off again, on again, gone again. Finnegan."

That's the July Fourth "lid." The latest report on it might read:

"On again, off again, on again. Fitz again."

For:

The Board of Aldermen passed an order recently allowing use of fireworks in the city streets, parks and squares.

O'Meara's Manifesto.

Then Police Commissioner O'Meara came out with a manifesto, stating that this would be enforced, and that policemen would use their discretion about allowing people to use fireworks in private premises.

Then seven of the aldermen yesterday signed an order to allow use of fireworks on private property, which took the "lid off" pretty much.

Upon which Police Commissioner O'Meara came out with a second manifesto intimating that this allowed people to do about as they pleased and that his coppers would try to enforce the law as best they could.

Then Mayor Fitzgerald, finding that business men and insurance underwriters were criticising this juggling of regulations, consulted Corporation Counsel Babson and found that the new order was illegal in the counsel's mind because it had not been passed at a meeting of the board and signed by the Mayor.

O'Meara Proclaims Again.

Meanwhile, Police Commissioner O'Meara had come out with a third manifesto, in which he had started to say that the failure of the original order, which kept the "lid on," would not take a single safe pleasure from the people.

Then he interlined a phrase to the effect that, "assuming that no action of a similar scope is taken by the Mayor and Aldermen, the police would retain the power to stop dangerous practices."

Then the Aldermen got together at 12:30 to-day and Alderman Baldwin introduced an order drawn by Mr. Babson in which it was permitted to discharge fireworks in the streets and squares "and such other portions of the city of Boston, including private grounds, on which exhibitions of fireworks can be given without exposing property to danger of fire."

Alderman Linehan had it amended so that it read simply "other portions of the city of Boston, including private grounds," which took the "lid" off. Then they passed this amended order and sent it to the Mayor, who refused to sign it, presumably fearing that the business men would kick again.

Finally the Mayor decided to call a second special meeting of the board at 1:45 o'clock and try to have the Aldermen pass the Babson order without the Linehan amendment. That will take the "lid off" again to the extent of allowing fireworks on private property.

But it will keep the "lid on" to the extent of restricting fireworks on private

Moran in Grand Jury Campaign Fund Inquiry

PUTS INNES ON RACK

Former State Senator Questioned by District Attorney Regarding Party Finances.

Ex-Senator Charles H. Innes is before the Grand Jury this afternoon in the investigation being conducted by District Attorney Moran into the receipt and distribution of Republican campaign funds.

Mr. Innes was at the courthouse at 10 o'clock ready to appear before the Grand Jury as the subpoena served on him yesterday indicated. He found out, however, that he was not expected until the afternoon session.

If the District Attorney concludes with Mr. Innes in time Colonel Thomas Talbot, chairman of the Republican State Committee, Joseph N. Peterson, the treasurer, and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, James B. Reynolds, may given their testimony today.

That Mr. Moran is trying to find out if perjury was committed in testimony given in connection with the indictment and trial of Robert G. Proctor, convicted private secretary of Senator Lodge, and is after the big corporations who may have contributed to campaign funds under "dummy" names, is believed by those who are following the investigation.

All of the high men in the Republican machine are closely following the line of inquiry at the courthouse, and endeavoring to ascertain just what sort of a sensation the District Attorney will spring when he gets through with the large number of witnesses he has called to testify. They would give much to know what is going to develope.

CAPT. NATHAN APPLETON IS GRANTED DIVORCE

Captain Nathan Appleton, clubman, famous traveler and diplomat, was to-day granted a divorce from his wife, Jeanette W. Appleton, by Judge Fessenden. The grounds were desertion. Mrs. Appleton did not appear in court, and there were no witnesses.

The fact that Captain Appleton, who is a member of Boston and New York's aristocratic society, desired a divorce was made public last December.

At the same time the interesting fact was told by him, and the young woman that he contemplated marriage with, Miss Edith Russell Will, a charming young woman of Newburyport.

Mrs. Appleton was a native of Munich, Germany. She was married to Captain Appleton in Brooklyn, N. Y., November 16, 1887, and it is said she deserted him January 10, 1889, in New York.

DEUTSCHLAND SIGNALS LEAD IN BIG OCEAN RACE

NEW YORK, July 3. The first report of the progress of the race between the Hamburg-American line flyer Deutschland and the French line's new steamer La Provence, from New York to the Needles, was received here to-day. The news was brought by the Red Star line steamer Kroonland, which arrived from Antwerp.

Captain Dexrud said that on June 29 he was in wireless communication with each of the contestants. Captain Kampff of the Deutschland said that his vessel was fifty miles ahead of La Provence. Captain Alix of the Frenchman, however, stated that he was gaining on his rival.

Neither Captain Kampff nor Captain Alix gave the position of his vessel while communication with the Kroonland.

At the time the Kroonland was in latitude 41 degrees 19 minutes, North; longitude 52 degrees 34 minutes, West.

The Deutschland and La Provence sailed from New York on Thursday last, the former for Plymouth, Cherbourg and Hamburg, and the latter for Havre. The Deutschland crossed the bar at 11 a. m., the Frenchman following at 12:11 p. m.

There is considerable interest in the outcome of the race, owing to the fact that the Deutschland has been queen of the seas until on the last eastward voyage the La Provence reached the Needles a few hours ahead of the Hamburg flyer.

MALONE WILL "GO SLOW" IN MERGER PROBE

Will Wait Return of Railroad Commissioners from Europe Before Acting.

OPPOSES POLICY OF HASTE

Attorney-General Dana Malone says he does not expect to act in the merger law controversy until Chairman Jackson of the Railroad Commission and Commissioner Bishop return from Europe. Under an order of the last Legislature the commissioners went abroad to study the question of fenders for street cars and safeguards for railroad cars. They are not expected back until the last of this month.

The Attorney-General says he has a mass of accumulated business on his desk that must be gotten out of the way before he can take up any new propositions. Furthermore, he wishes to consult with the chairman of the commission before bringing court proceedings, as Chairman Jackson has given much study to the questions involved.

On Record in Favor of Merging.

In their report for 1905, the railroad commissioners went on record in favor of the merging of railroads and street railways as a matter of public policy. They pointed out that in many instances improved service had come from the investment of railroad capital in street railways, and argued that it was not to be presumed the interests of the public would suffer because of consolidation. It is doubtful, therefore, how the commissioners can give the Attorney-General information of illegal street railway holdings when they are recorded as favoring merging.

When asked by a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN when he proposed to go ahead and bring the railroads into court to test the legality of their street railway holdings, the Attorney General said:

"Oh, you are too swift; you haven't let me catch my breath. The Legislature has been out of business only a few days. That body kept me pretty busy for several days and my regular work suffered in consequence."

"Are you going to wait until the Railroad Commissioners report to you?" was asked.

"Demands Slow Treatment."

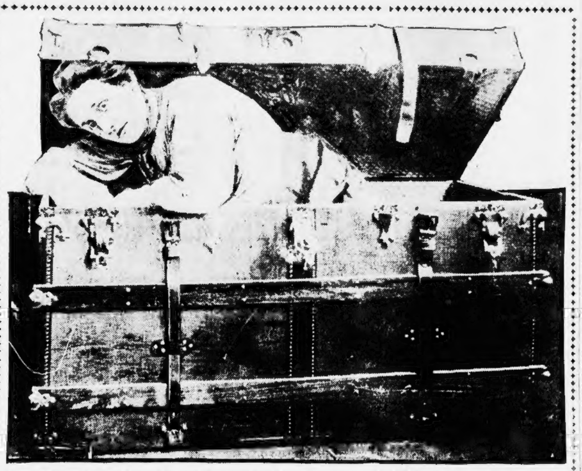
"I am inclined to think I shall. Technically, I am supposed to do that, but there is another view of the case that might allow me to go ahead independently. That phase of the question will have the earliest consideration I can give it," said the Attorney General.

"Why not set a good example and go right ahead? If you wait for the commissioners to direct you, you will have to wait until the absent ones return to make a quorum of the commission, and that will take time," it was suggested.

"Yes, I know that, but that would be the proper way, and, at any rate, it is a matter that demands slow but sure treatment. You must give me time to catch my breath after the strenuous time we had with the Legislature," was the parting shot of the Attorney General.

From present indications, therefore, it will be several weeks before the Attorney General makes up his mind when and how to proceed against the merger evil.

BRIDE OUTWITS GUESTS BY ESCAPING IN TRUNK



From Photograph of the Bride by Purdy, Boston.

MRS. CRAPO AND HOW SHE HID IN TRUNK FROM JOKERS.

Those Armed With Confetti Wait in Vain While Fair One Leaves as Baggage.

MARION, July 3.—The people of this town are still in a gale of amusement over the startling escape of Mrs. William H. Crapo, a few minutes after she had ceased to be Miss Georgia H. Nye, from the house in which her girl friends were waiting to pelt her with confetti. Mrs. Crapo was determined before her wedding that she would give her friends the slip, and all her effects were packed up and sent away before the ceremony to the home of the groom. While the bridal party were waiting with their rice and confetti, an automobile was driven to the house and two men who alighted went upstairs and carried down a large trunk.

About the same time the groom was seen to leave the house by the back door in his shirtsleeves. The trunk was loaded on the automobile and the crowd watched it drive away. Then they were puzzled when they saw Carl Clifford, one of the ushers, who had accompanied the auto, feverishly loosening the straps of the trunk and astounded when the lid was thrown back and Mrs. Crapo stepped out.

To win her point she had arranged with her husband and the usher to be locked into the trunk and carried out of the house that way. Mr. Crapo, still hatless and coatless, boarded the car soon after it left the house. The couple were driven to his house, where they collected their things, and from there to the railroad station at Onset.

ARRESTS IN GOTHAM FOR HUB GEM THEFT

Chief Inspector Watts was notified to-day of the arrest in New York of Sarah Johnson and John Archer, colored, on the charge of larceny of a set of diamond earrings valued at $300 from Mrs. Martha A. Garvin of the Hotel Argyle, No. 391 Massachusetts avenue. The Johnson woman was employed by Mrs. Garvin and disappeared when the earrings were lost.

SAYS $300 BASEBALL WAGER WAS STOLEN

On a charge of the larceny of $300 preferred by Fred Castellucci, of No. 21 Nashua street, Somerville, Frank Griffin, aged forty, of No. 116 Appleton street, South End, was arrested to-day by Inspectors Conway and Cronin. Castellucci complains that on June 19 he handed $300 to Griffin to bet on a baseball game. He alleges that Griffin forgot all about what he was to do with the money, hence the arrest.

GEORGE TO BE RETIRED BY THE GOVERNOR

Stated on High Authority That Gas Commissioner Will Not be Reappointed.

GUILD HEEDS PROTESTS

Because of the many strong objections urged against Gas Commissioner Samuel W. George, of Haverhill, it is said on the best of authority that Governor Guild will not reappoint him to the Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners.

The well-known subserviency of Commissioner George to the demands of the lighting trusts has been emphatically called to the attention of the Governor, and his antipathy to the requests of the public has been submitted as good reasons for dropping him from the place.

There is the best of reason for believing that Governor Guild will pay heed to the violent prosteste against Commissioner George and fill his place with another.

Of the many able and honest men who have been suggested to him as eminently qualified to deal with the problems of the office in a way that will be satisfactory to the people, the Governor, it is said, will make no selection, but will appoint to the position a man who, if not directly connected now with the gas interests of the State, has had a personal interest and experience in the business.

It has been the custom for Governors, in making selections for State boards and commissions, not to make it a hard and fast point to choose men interested even indirectly in the line of business to be controlled. But Governor Guild has let it be known that his choice will be a man who has had experience in the lighting business, one whose natural honesty, he thinks, will be a sufficient shield against the temptations that may be put in his way by his friends in the lighting business.

The appointment of the new gas and electric light commissioner will probably be made at the next meeting of the executive council Thursday afternoon. Commissioner George's term expired by limit of law July 1, but he holds office until his successor has been apointed.

SYNDICATE BUYS MILL AT TAUNTON

TAUNTON, July 3.—The Wamsutta mill, which was abandoned, was sold to-day to a syndicate, headed by R. G. Dery, who is interested in mills in Mauch Chunk, Catasqua and Allentown, Pa. It will be known as the Taunton River mill and will begin with 175 operatives. Colonel Peter H. Corr, who was interested in the old mill, is a stockholder.

DEAD VALET TOLD OF THAW'S WEDDED LIFE

Deposition of Trusted Servant of White's Slayer Says Evelyn Nesbit and Her Husband Were Always Happy and Contented With Each Other.

NEW YORK, July 3.—As soon as it became known at the district attorney's office that William Bedford, valet for Harry Kendall Thaw for seven years, had died yesterday from appendicitis, it was decided to make public his deposition made before Assistant District Attorney Garvan on the day following the killing of Stanford White. Mr. Garvan admitted that Bedford's death would weaken the prosecution along certain vital lines.

Bedford's testimony to the District Attorney's office, however, bore largely upon the happy married life of Harry J. Thaw and his beautiful young wife, of Thaw's good habits and the fact that he never became excited, save when things went wrong. He was then apt to become highly excited.

Bedford in his sworn affidavit states that the marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Thaw were always of the pleasantest nature.

HAPPY; NEVER QUARRELLED.

"They got along well together," said Bedford. "They were happy and contented with each other.

"Did they ever quarrel?"

"I never knew them to quarrel or be angry with each other," Bedford responded. "There were absolutely no flaws in their domestic affairs."

"What were the habits of Mr. Thaw?"

"His habits were good. Mr. Thaw was moderate in all things."

"Did he ever become excited?"

"Only once in a while, when things did not go right."

Bedford also testified that Thaw, in his opinion, never gave any evidences of being insane. He also said that Thaw was never in a sanitarium or institution of any sort during the past seven years that he had served him as a valet.

NEVER HAD MENTAL TROUBLE.

"Was Thaw ever treated by a physician because of his habits and mental condition since you have known him?"

"He never was, to my knowledge," Bedford responded.

Testimony was given by Bedford regarding Thaw's condition on the evening of the tragedy. The valet said that he had dressed his employer for dinner.

"What was his condition that night?"

"It was the same as usual," Bedford said, "and at that time there was nothing to suggest any mental disturbance."

"Did you occupy a room in the apartment of Mr. Thaw?" was the next question.

"No, the maid and I occupied rooms upstairs."

Some of Thaw's friends have suggested that his mind has been weakened by the use of narcotics and drugs. Bedford was not entirely conclusive on a question as to whether his master took such drugs, but believed he did not.

DID NOT KNOW OF DRUGS.

"He did usually take a dinner pill to aid digestion," he stated, "but I have no knowledge of his having taken drugs or narcotics. There was never any occasion for it."

Regarding the report that Stanford White had been in communication with Mrs. Thaw, and that someone in the Thaw household had acted as a go-between, Bedford said:

"Mrs. Thaw, I am positive, has never received any notes from White since her marriage, and no one in the Thaw home ever had anything to do with White. There was no go-between. Those in Thaw's employ were loyal to him."

Bedford also declared that Thaw had been in the habit of carrying a revolver for two years prior to the murder. The valet said, however, that Thaw did not always have the weapon with him.

The valet swore that Mrs. Thaw had never, in his presence, after the shooting, gone to her room and secured a package of letters written to her by Stanford White. He had also never heard any request from Mrs. Thaw for any letters.

WHITE'S MONEY IN PLOT TO RUIN THAW

By Boston American Leased Wire.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 3.—Another evidence of the implacable hatred and furious warfare that raged between Harry Thaw and Stanford White for months preceding the tragic result of the young millionaire's endeavor to vindicate the honor of his beautiful wife was unearthed here to-day by a representative of the AMERICAN.

Less than a year ago, not long after the marriage of Harry Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit in April, an agent of White sought to arrange a campaign of villification against Thaw in the latter's home city.

Offers were made of an unstinted sum for the launching of a systematic endeavor to bring discredit upon Thaw's name through the newspapers.

MAN ENTERED INTO PLOT.

The story was told to-day by the man with whom negotiations were entered into. It is almost certain that his narrative will form one of the important elements in the case of the defence.

A man named McDonald went to Pittsburg from New York and sought an interview with a person who was in a position to reflect the views and projects of his clients in the Pittsburg newspapers and in the dispatches sent out from that city to the newspapers of New York and other centres.

"I want to retain you to exploit a young man," said McDonald.

"There is plenty of money back of this. I am one of the business representatives of Stanford White of New York. I will pay you a retaining fee of $5,000. To put it bluntly, you are expected to bribe newspaper men in Mr. White's interest.

"What Mr. White wants is this: He is anxious to discredit Harry Thaw in every possible manner. He has reasons for doing this and he is willing to spend almost any sum if it can be done successfully.

RESULTS ONLY WANTED.

"We have detectives watching Thaw's movements. What you are to do is to receive reports from these men and cause them to be printed in the Pittsburg and New York newspapers. You may draw upon me for as much money as you can use. All I want is results."

Thaw was made acquainted with the conspiracy. The revelation threw him into a profound rage. Through a third person he caused White to understand that he was cognizant of what had been projected and conveyed to him a bitter defiance.

ONE POINT DECIDES DEFENCE OF THAW

NEW YORK, July 3.—The exact line of defence of Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, hinges on one point, and one alone—whether White intruded his attentions upon Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, or attacked her character as a wife. If the efforts of the lawyers who have been retained by the Thaw millions establish beyond doubt the fact that White did either, that will be the sole defence offered at Thaw's trial.

Further than that, if the army of investigators now at work on the case in the interest of Thaw succeed in getting three or four links not yet complete in the chain of proof on this point within the time expected, an immediate move will be made to bring the young murderer to trial by force of public sentiment.

"Did White Deserve His Fate."

Thaw's friends and advisers are concentrating their entire attention upon the task of proving that White deserved his fate by attempting to enforce his attentions upon the wife of another man, or that he verbally attacked her character as a wife with intent to besmirch it.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw has supplied the most important links to support this defence. She has been most thoroughly and fully interrogated as to her relations with White after her marriage to Thaw.

Has Told Every Detail.

She has been made to describe every detail of her first meeting with White, when she came to New York, supply details, dates and incidents of her various meetings with him, the names of men and women she met at his studio and in the apartments of other men, but more particularly every detail touching upon her meetings with him, the time of day, place, date and circumstances of her communications of any sort with White after her marriage to Thaw.

The result of these interrogations, covering four sittings with her counsel, has been sixty-one pages of foolscap paper, closely typewritten.

CHARITY SEALS MY LIPS ON THAW CASE

—Rev. Fr. Ducey

By Rev. Father Thos. J. Ducey

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Thaw case is one of the most appalling tragedies occurring within my memory. I have very strong views about it, but from my viewpoint, as a priest of the Catholic Church, I think the expression of my opinion at the present time would be a violation of the laws of charity.

I would have to give my views of the dead as well as of the living, and as a minister of religion I do not think that it is my privilege to wound the feelings of the innocent and respected relatives of the dead and the living when their hearts are bleeding with agony and a most despairing grief.

The BOSTON AMERICAN must pardon me from a further expression of an opinion. Later, when the case is passed upon by a tribunal of the law, I will be free to review the case.

I knew Mr. White very well, but I will not express my opinion of his life at the present time. I know and respect his family and his widow. They are people eminently respected, of the best social position and warmly regarded by all who know them. Even if they were strangers to me you can readily see that my duty as a minister of religion would be to comfort them, as I would be obliged to comfort the mother and relatives of the accused man, who are strangers to me.

I cannot speak on either side of the case at present, it would do no good and it might do much harm. For the present the course of the minister of religion in public utterance over this appalling tragedy is to recognize that "silence is golden."

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfils every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, and a book that tells all about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the Boston Daily American. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SCORCHER FOR FOURTH; HEAT PROSTRATIONS

Weather Man, However, Says There May Be Showers to Help a Little.

TO-DAY'S TEMPERATURE.

6 a. m.	69 degrees
7 a. m.	72 degrees
8 a. m.	74 degrees
9 a. m.	76 degrees
10 a. m.	77 degrees

With rising temperature, with the humidity twelve per cent. above normal and with four prostrations already recorded, Boston is suffering to-day from weather that threatens a distressing Fourth unless conditions improve.

The weather man is hopeful. He says that it will be fair on the "night before," also fair to-morrow. He promises showers for to-morrow afternoon or evening, with light, variable winds.

But things must improve considerably between now and midnight to make the Fourth comfortable.

The thermometer jumped from 69 degrees at 6 a. m. to-day to 77 degrees at 10 o'clock. The humidity at 8 o'clock was 82, which is 12 per cent. over the normal mark of 70. This means sticky, sweltering, dangerous weather.

The first prostration reported to-day was that of Albion C. McIntyre. He is 60 years old and is reported as having no home. He was in the store, No. 624 Atlantic avenue, and fell to the floor, helpless. He was taken to the Relief Hospital. He will recover.

Richard J. Curry, 40 years old, living at No. 683 Massachusetts avenue, while working in the hot house at the City Hospital, where he is a gardener, was overcome by the heat. He was found several minutes afterward lying upon the floor and removed into the City Hospital.

Alice Finkley, thirty years old, of No. 36 Sawyer street, Roxbury, while sitting upon the doorstep of her home, collapsed from the intense heat. She was removed to the City Hospital.

Mary A. Carpenter, seventy-six years old, living at Locke and Fourth streets, South Boston, fell, overcome by heat, on Park street, Dorchester, this noon and was taken home in a Station 13 ambulance.

'WE'RE MARRIED! FORGIVE!' HARVARD ELOPER 'PHONED

Paul Beckwith, Wealthy Athlete, and Helen Maxwell, Janitor's Daughter, Wed Secretly,

"Hello! Is that Mrs. Maxwell?"

"Yes. Who are you?"

"I'm Paul Beckwith. Your daughter Helen and I have just been married. We're in Providence now and will soon be on our way to New York. You'll forgive us, won't you? Good-bye."

That is how Paul Beckwith, Harvard graduate, used the telephone to break the news of his elopement to his astonished mother-in-law, Mrs. Charles R. Maxwell, of No. 308 Warren street.

Beckwith is the only son of a wealthy and distinguished Congregationalist clergyman of Bangor, Me., who owns real estate in Chicago and has a Summer home in Bar Harbor.

He is a handsome six-footer, twenty-three years old, straight, broad-shouldered and muscular. Although every inch an athlete and a devotee of football, he did not neglect his books for sport, and was graduated with honors in the class of 1906.

Bride Young and Beautiful.

Helen Anna Maxwell, the bride, is in her twenty-first year. While the bridegroom is a blonde, she is a brunette of rare and striking beauty. Indeed, her good looks have been a source of much worry to her mother.

"Artists and photographers were always wanting to get Helen to pose as a model," said Mrs. Maxwell to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day. "Theatrical managers were constantly after her. They wanted her to become what they call a 'show girl.' But Helen, who is the most modest girl you ever met, turned down every proposition that was made to her in the publicity line."

"Did the news of the elopement come as a shock to you?"

"Yes and no. I knew young Beckwith and liked him. He has been calling at the house for the last four years. Although he never mentioned matrimony—at any rate in my hearing—I was always inclined to believe that some day or other he and Helen would be man and wife. As for me, I wouldn't have objected to the match, for Paul is just a lovely young man, and you can't make that too strong when you come to write about them."

Father Disliked Harvard Men.

"Why did they elope?"

"Well, probably for the romance of the thing. Besides, Helen's father was never very enthusiastic about the young man from Harvard."

Mr. Maxwell, by the way, is a hard-working janitor. He has little use for romance. His intercourse with "society" has not been extensive. Heretofore he has looked upon college men with more suspicion than awe. Nor has he any use for flowery or flowers of speech, even when brides and bridegrooms are concerned.

"Hope it turns out all right," he said, referring to the elopement. "As to the young fellow, he looks the goods. He'd better be good to her, that's all."

DR. MORGAN DIX IS IMPROVING

Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix of the Trinity Episcopal Church of New York, who is ill at the Somerset, is improving to-day.

Dr. and Mrs. Dix came over for the Barnard-Sottler wedding on June 16. The day following the exercises at Harvard Dr. Dix became ill, as the result of a chill, and the indisposition which followed forced him to keep to his bed.

FOLEY SHIVERS IN FOOTBALL RUSH OF GAELS

Councilman Picks Two Teams for Contest To-morrow, Though Seven Apply.

BLAMES "REGGIE" BANGS

Councilman Bill Foley of Ward 7 is suffering from too much Gaelic football.

By the same token, he is in position to appreciate rightly the Pickwick philosophy. One remembers when Mr. Pickwick remarks:

"I was reflecting on the mutability of human affairs."

And Alfred Jingle replies:

"In at the palace door one day, out of the window the next, hey?"

That's Bill. He has been acclaimed as the friend of the horny-handed working man ever since he advocated a law that landlords should be compelled to take tenants with big families. It was fondly called "No Race Suicide Bill." Mothers said, "Mr. Foley is a lovely man."

"Reggie" Bangs's Fault.

Now it is all changed and Foley is excerated.

It is all "Reggie" Bangs's fault anyway, says Bill. "Reggie" is councilman from 11, the "dude" ward, and is chairman of the Fourth of July committee. He put Bill in charge of the $100 prize to be played for by the two Gaelic football teams.

Pleased at the distinction, Bill announced he had the $100 and then sat back and waited for the two teams to come forth and make themselves known.

They came. First were the "Boston Rangers," then the "Erin's Hopes." Bill was in City Hall and saw them coming. He prepared to dictate conditions and be arbitrary.

But down School street and up the City Hall yard came the Kickhams. The "Kicks" are from the old South Cove and they can play Gaelic football like a whirlwind. They were going to be one of the two teams or know why.

And "Garry Owens" March Up.

Just then the "Garry Owens," who had planned how they would spend the hundred dollars, came around the corner on the double.

"Say, Bangs," said Bill nervously to "Reggie" from the "dude" ward, "what's that third and fourth bunch?"

"Gaelic football teams," said "Reggie" cheerfully. "They want to play, too."

"There ain't but one prize and only two teams can play," said Bill.

"You just tell 'em that," said "Reggie."

Bill took one look out the window. At that minute the "Tipperary Ramblers," followed by the "Wolf Tones" and the "Shamrocks," came up the walk looking for Foley.

"I've got to see a man," said Foley, skipping into the elevator.

"Take me way up—far as you like," he said to the elevator man.

Now "Reggie" Rubs It In.

But the "Kicks," "Owens," "Tones," "Rangers" and other teams followed him up and Bill had to pick two teams out of the bunch. In an agony of indecision Bill finally selected the "Rangers" and the "Erin's Hopes." Now the others swear they will be on the Common to-morrow morning and find out why they are not eligible.

To make it worse, "Reggie" Bangs also demands from Bill one-half of the separate $200 appropriation for Wards 7 and 11. Ward 11 has never claimed any of this, saying it was rich and could pay its own bills. Now, just after Bill has planned all the $200 for Ward 7, "Reggie" cruelly upsets all precedent by saying that Ward 11 needs the money this year.

That's why Bill Foley is more full of trouble than the Republican State Committee.

ISLAM CONVERT HUSBAND GONE

Married but four months and now deserted, Mrs. Minnie Moorabian to-day appealed to the Lynn police to find and bring back to her her husband, Zaker Moorabian, a shoe worker, who lived with his wife until yesterday in apartments at No. 17 Oxford street, Lynn.

Moorabian, who is a Turk by birth, married his bride on February 23 last. Previous to the ceremony he espoused the Roman Catholic religion, renouncing Islamism. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Fr. John Coleman of St. Joseph's Church.

For some time the couple got along happily together, then dissensions, according to the bride, crept in, and Zaker threatened his bride time and again that he would leave her.

SAYS PERJURY LED TO 'MURDER' OF C. L. TUCKER

"Citizen" William Calls on District Attorney Moran to Investigate.

CALLS TRIAL A CRIME

To District Attorney John B. Moran "Citizen" William Peel of No. 101½ Common street has addressed an "open letter" demanding an investigation of the charges that "conspiracy and fraud" caused the "illegal murder" of Charles L. Tucker.

"You are compelled by your office, in the course of your duty, to investigate these charges of murder and to place the guilty parties on trial for their lives," says "Citizen" William Peel.

Following is the letter:

To the District Attorney of Suffolk County: John B. Moran. Dear Sir—You are sworn, according to your oath of office as District Attorney for Suffolk County, to investigate all crimes, charges of crime and fraud that are enacted, committed or perpetrated in your said district.

We know that perjury was committed at the trial of Charles Louis Tucker for the murder of Mabel Page. We have received information from reliable sources "that much evidence was placed before the jury that was not read or produced in the open court at the trial, on account of it being unfit for publication."

If this is true, then it was illegal. This act alone would prove a conspiracy and fraud to send Charles L. Tucker to his death in the electric chair.

This conspiracy and fraud did not originate in your said district, but it had its ending at the hearing before Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., in the executive chamber at the State House, the Governor refusing to commute the sentence of said Tucker, or even give him a respite of life for thirty days, so that these fraud charges might be investigated.

The Governor's actions were illegal, in the face of said charges, and Charles Louis Tucker was illegally murdered in the State prison at Charlestown at the hands of this government, by electrocution, on or about June 12, 1906, at 12.12 a. m.

That murder did take place and was committed in your district of Suffolk County, over which you are District Attorney, and you are compelled by your office, in the course of your duty, to investigate these charges of murder and to place the guilty parties on trial for their lives. I say it is your duty to use every power at your command to see that "justice is done."

Yours truly,
CITIZEN WILLIAM PEEL.

'TOURIST' GIRLS, IN 22 AUTOS, MAKE A MIDNIGHT DESCENT ON PARAGON PARK

Party of 100 Chorus Members and Theatrical People Entertained.

Dash Through Rain and Muddy Streets Thoroughly Enjoyed by Merry Visitors.

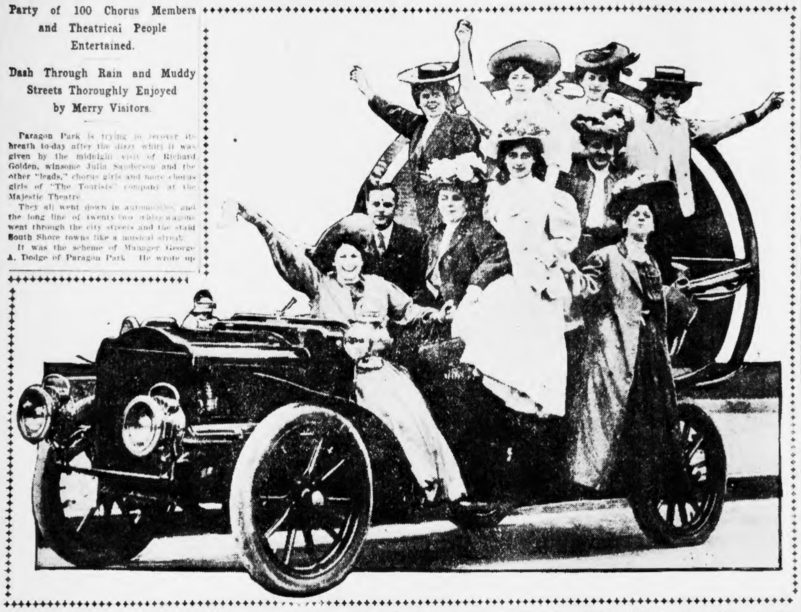
Paragon Park is trying to recover its breath to-day after the dizzy whirl it was given by the midnight visit of Richard Golden, winsome Julia Sanderson and the other "leads," chorus girls and more chorus girls of "The Tourists" company at the Majestic Theatre.

They all went down in automobiles, and the long line of twenty-two white wagons went through the city streets and the staid South Shore towns like a musical streak.

It was the scheme of Manager George A. Dodge of Paragon Park. He wrote up to Ed. Smith, manager of the Majestic, and told him to have the whole bunch come down after the show and be guests at the Park.

Would they go?

"Is mamma going?" asked Miss Sanderson anxiously. You know that the demure Julia never goes even across the street without "Mamma, dear," going along, too. So Channing Pollock used to write it for the New York papers anyway.



GROUP OF "TOURIST" GIRLS IN WHITE AUTO PARTY WAS ENTERTAINED AT PARAGON PARK.

Girls Sang With "The Rajah."

All went, however, mamma or no mamma. They started from the theatre right after the evening show. All Tremont and Boylston streets stared as the gay crowd clambered into the big cars. The chorus and "show" girls sang, with Bill Pruette, the "Rajah of Bangapang," carrying the bass with his profundo.

The autos whirled out through Boylston street and Commonwealth avenue, and then Bessie Scott said ecstatically to P. L. Thompson, her chauffeur, "Let's beat 'em all."

Thompson "let her out a notch," and his car whirled to the front of the line and kept the lead clear to Paragon Park. In that car with Bessie Scott were Lena Swift and Lillian Randolph. The string of cars sped through Jamaica Plain, Mattapan, Milton, Quincy, North Weymouth, Hingham and Hull. It was heaven help anything that got in the way of the face.

In Quincy a lone cop bustled out into the road and held up a warning hand, but he might as well have signalled to a tornado.

At the park the bunch was met by Manager Dodge, the combined bands, and got a welcome and a serenade. Then Manager Dodge, with seven different girls clustered about him, escorted the crowd all over the place.

Oh, Such Bumping the Bumps!

You should have seen that crowd of girls 'bump the sand bumps.' The bumps were simply a procession of screaming girls and screaming hosiery. There never was anything like it since the water first came down at Lodore.

Everybody went from Hades to Paradise, through the Foolish House, shivered at the lions and other savage beasts in Bostock's animal show and then went into the Palm Garden to dinner. After eating till the hungriest chorus girl said "no more, thank you," they posed for photographs. Then they tried the sand bumps again and finally, at 1:30 a. m., started homeward with the rising sun.

Chauffeur Thompson, who won the down trip in his 1905 model Thomas, started sixth on the way back, but won out again, much to the delight of Bessie Scott, Rena Swift and Lillian Randolph.

As Vera Michelena said when they came home: "It was a lovely time and Mr. Dodge is a perfect dear."

FINDS HIS WIFE HOMELESS; IN WOMAN'S SUPREME AGONY NO MONEY, NO DOCTOR FOR "JUNGLE" POOR

Upton Sinclair Tells of Happenings in Stockyard District That Sapped Giant's Strength and Spirit.

CHAPTER XVIII. (Continued).

Ah! they had cast their all into the fight; and they had lost, they had lost! All that they had paid was gone—every cent of it. And their house was gone—they were back where they had started from, flung out into the cold to starve and freeze!

Victim of Vultures

Jurgis could see all the truth now—could see himself, through the whole long course of events, the victim of ravenous vultures that had torn into his vitals and devoured him; of the fiends that had racked and tortured him, mocking him, meantime, jeering in his face.

Ah, God, the horror of it, the monstrous, hideous, demoniacal wickedness of it! He and his family, helpless women and children, struggling to live, ignorant and defenceless and forlorn as they were—and the enemies that had been lurking for them, crouching upon their trail and thirsting for their blood!

That first lying circular, that smooth-tongued slippery agent! That trap of the extra payments, the interest, and all the other charges that they had no means to pay, and would never have attempted to pay!

And then all the tricks of the packers, their masters, the tyrants who ruled them—the shut-downs and the scarcity of work, the irregular hours and the cruel speeding-up, the lowering of wages, the raising of prices. The mercilessness of nature about them, of heat and cold, rain and snow; the mercilessness of the city, of the country in which they lived, of its laws and customs that they did not understand!

All of these things had worked together for the company that had marked them for its prey and was waiting for its chance. And now, with this last hideous injustice, its time had come, and it had turned them out bag and baggage, and taken their house and sold it again!

And they could do nothing, they were tied hand and foot—the law was against them, the whole machinery of society was at their oppressors' command. If Jurgis so much as raised a hand against them, back he would go into that wild-beast pen from which he had just escaped!

To get up and go away was to give up, to acknowledge defeat, to leave the strange family in possession; and Jurgis might have sat shivering in the rain for hours before he could do that, had it not been for the thought of his family. It might be that he had worse things yet to learn—and so he got to his feet and started away, walking on, wearily, half dazed.

To Aniele's house, in back of the yards, was a good two miles; the distance had never seemed longer to Jurgis, and when he saw the familiar dingy gray shanty his heart was beating fast. He ran up the steps and began to hammer upon the door.

Ona Near Death

The old woman herself came to open it. She had shrunk all up with her rheumatism since Jurgis had seen her last, and her yellow parchment face stared up at him from a little above the level of the door knob. She gave a start when she saw him. "Is Ona here?" he cried breathlessly.

"Yes," was the answer, "she's here."

"How ——" Jurgis began, and then he stopped short, clutching convulsively at the side of the door. From somewhere within the house had come a sudden cry, a wild, horrible scream of anguish. And the voice was Ona's.

For a moment Jurgis stood half-paralysed with fright; then he bounded past the old woman and into the room.

It was Aniele's kitchen, and huddled round the stove were half a dozen women, pale and frightened.

One of them started to her feet as Jurgis entered; she was haggard and frightfully thin, with one arm tied up in bandages—he hardly realized that it was Marija. He looked first for Ona; then, not seeing her, he stared at the women, expecting them to speak. But they sat dumb, gazing back at him, panic-stricken; and a second later came another piercing scream.

It was from the rear of the house, and upstairs. Jurgis bounded to a door of the room and flung it open; there was a ladder leading through a trapdoor to the garret, and he was at the foot of it, when suddenly he heard a voice behind him and saw Marija at his heels. She seized him by the sleeve with her good hand, panting wildly, "No, no, Jurgis! Stop!"

"What do you mean?" he gasped.

"You mustn't go up," she cried.

Jurgis was half-crazed with bewilderment and fright. "What's the matter?" he shouted. "What is it?"

Marija clung to him tightly; he could hear Ona sobbing and moaning above, and he fought to get away and climb up, without waiting for her reply. "No, no," she rushed on. "Jurgis! You mustn't go up! It's—it's the child!"

"The child?" he echoed in perplexity. "Antanas?"

Marija answered him, in a whisper: "The new one!"

And then Jurgis went limp, and caught himself on the ladder. He stared at her as if she were a ghost. "The new one!" he gasped. "But it isn't time," he added, wildly.

Marija nodded. "I know," she said; "but it's come."

And then again came Ona's scream, smiting him like a blow in the face, making him wince and turn white. Her voice died away in a wail—then he heard her sobbing again. "My God—let me die, let me die!" And Marija flung her arms about him, crying: "Come out! Come away!"

No Money for Aid

She dragged him back into the kitchen, half carrying him, for he had gone all to pieces. It was as if the pillars of his soul had fallen in—he was blasted with horror. In the room he sank into a chair, trembling like a leaf, Marija still holding him, and the women staring at him in dumb, helpless fright.

And then again Ona cried out; he could hear it nearly as plainly here, and he staggered to his feet. "How long has this been going on?" he panted.

"Not very long," Marija answered, and then, at a signal from Aniele, she rushed on: "You go away, Jurgis—you can't help—go away and come back later. It's all right—it's——"

"Who's with her?" Jurgis demanded; and then, seeing Marija hesitating, he cried again: "Who's with her?"

"She's—she's all right," she answered. "Elzbieta's with her."

"But the doctor!" he panted. "Some one who knows!"

He seized Marija by the arm; she trembled, and her voice sank beneath a whisper as she replied, "We—we have no money." Then, frightened by the look on his face, she exclaimed: "It's all right, Jurgis! You don't understand—go away—go away! Ah, if you only had waited!"

Above her protests Jurgis heard Ona again; he was almost out of his mind. It was all new to him, raw and horrible—it had fallen upon him like a lightning stroke. When little Antanas was born he had been at work, and had known nothing about it until it was over; and now he was not to be controlled.

The frightened women were at their wits' ends; one after another they tried to reason with him, to make him understand that this was the lot of women. In the end they half drove him out into the rain, where he began to pace up and down, bareheaded and frantic.

Because he could hear Ona from the street, he would first go away to escape the sounds, and then come back because he could not help it. At the end of a quarter of an hour he rushed up the steps again and for fear that he would break in the door they had to open it and let him in.

Scarcely Alive.

There was no arguing with him. They could not tell him that all was going well—how could they know, he cried—why, she was dying, she was being torn to pieces! Listen to her—listen!

Why, it was monstrous—it could not be allowed—there must be some help for it! Had they tried to get a doctor? They might pay him afterwards—they could promise——

"We couldn't promise, Jurgis," protested Marija. "We had no money—we have scarcely been able to keep alive."

"But I can work," Jurgis exclaimed. "I can earn money!"

NOTIFY MORAN OF MYSTERY IN GIRL'S DEATH

Physicians Admit Miss Cosgrove Was Dying When Taken to Hospital.

EXAMINER TO INVESTIGATE

Mystery surrounds the death of pretty twenty-two-year-old Elizabeth Cosgrove at the City Hospital to-day. Medical Examiner McDonald is investigating at request of the hospital authorities, who decline to discuss the case, and District Attorney John B. Moran has been notified of suspicious features which have been unearthed.

The girl came to the institution last week in a critical condition. The cause of her death was announced to-day in guarded terms to be due to childbirth. That the girl received treatment before she entered the hospital, the physicians admit, and intimate that she was in a dying condition when she was received.

The girl's father, Daniel E. Cosgrove, was summoned to-day by the hospital authorities.

40,000 TO JOIN IN SALUTE AS SALEM BONFIRE IS LIGHTED

Huge Blaze on "The Lookout" Hill Will Be Visible for Miles Around.

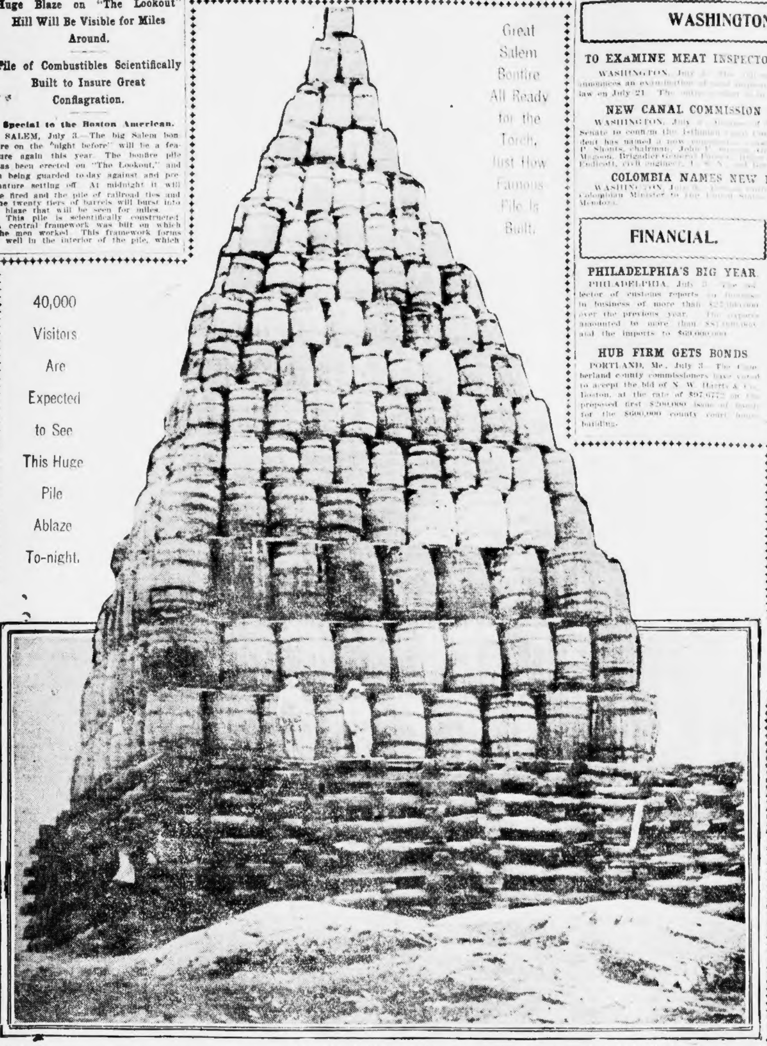
Pile of Combustibles Scientifically Built to Insure Great Conflagration.

Special to the Boston American.

SALEM, July 3.—The big Salem bonfire on the "night before" will be a feature again this year. The bonfire pile has been erected on "The Lookout," and is being guarded to-day against and premature setting off. At midnight it will be fired and the pile of railroad ties and the twenty tiers of barrels will burst into a blaze that will be seen for miles.

This pile is scientifically constructed. A central framework was bilt on which the men worked. This framework forms a well in the interior of the pile, which creates a terrific draught. It also enables those in charge to light the fire easily, setting it off in the middle of the bottom tier by aid of shavings and kerosene. The whole thing will be wet down with kerosene before it is fired, ensuring a quick, fierce blaze.

In the presence of some 40,000 Salemites and visitors the pyre will be touched off accompanied by a deafening salute of revolver shots.



Great Salem Bonfire All Ready for the Torch, Just How Famous Pile Is Built.

40,000 Visitors Are Expected to See This Huge Pile Ablaze To-night.

The fame of the Salem bonfire has traveled over the water. Last year a communication was received from Americans in Birmingham, England, asking just how this pile was constructed to give the best bonfire effect. It is probable that Americans in Birmingham will build a bonfire for themselves this year if they can get the Birmingham authorities to permit them to celebrate the anniversary of American independence.

The condition of Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, who for some days has been very ill at Dreamwold, her Scituate residence, is "still very dangerous," according to a statement made to-day by Mr. Lawson's secretary, Edward A. McSweeney. Mrs. Lawson had a very bad day yesterday.

Owing to the serious condition of Mrs. Lawson, her husband, Thomas W. Lawson, has given instructions that the annual fireworks display be postponed until Mrs. Lawson is better.

The Selectmen of Scituate have roped off all roads near Dreamwold, so that Mrs. Lawson may suffer from none of the July Fourth noise.

ROXBURY BOY KILLED BY GUN DISCHARGING

Special to the Boston American.

HAVERHILL, July 3.—Clarence Bigelow, fifteen years old, of Roxbury, was accidentally shot and killed to-day as he fell with two rifles in his arms in front of his camp on Lake Attitash. Young Bigelow tripped over a dress suit case, one of the guns which he was carrying striking the ground and discharging. The bullet went through his right cheek, splintering the jaw bone and lodging in the base of the brain. He died about an hour afterwards.

Bigelow is the son of Austin Bigelow of No. 12 Stanwood street, Roxbury. He came here Saturday with his cousin, Fred Quimby, from Worcester, and his chum, L. Melville Shalet of Roxbury, to spend his vacation camping out at the lake. They pitched their tent and this morning it was agreed to go hunting. Bigelow picked up Quimby's rifle and his own to carry them outside the tent to be greased.

When the gun was discharged the other boys ran to Bigelow's assistance, but he was unconscious. Drs. Rand and Murphy were summoned from Amesbury, but they could do nothing for him.

Bigelow's father was notied and the body will be taken to Boston for burial this

5,000 SIGN FOR SCHIDLOFSKI, WOMAN'S WORK

While John Schidlofski, convicted of the brutal murder of his wife, condemned to die during the week beginning next Sunday, cowers in terror in the death cell at the Charlestown State Prison, a woman is working to save him from the electric chair because she believes he is insane.

The woman is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Ady, wife of Dr. James C. Ady, of Berkeley street. She has secured 5,000 signatures to a petition asking that there be a reprieve that Schidlofski may be examined by insanity experts to determine his sanity. Mrs. Ady believes that these physicians should come from outside the State.

It is part of her plan that Governor Guild be directly appealed to. She is somewhat wroth over the fact that the women who signed the Tucker petition have failed to show an equal interest in Schidlofski.

Mrs. Ady is English, slightly built and full of sympathy. She talked earnestly to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter about efforts to help the condemned man.

"I am interested in Schidlofski's case for humanitarian reasons only," she said. "I have never seen the man, but my good friend, Dr. Jacob Goldszmit, who recently came to Boston from Russia, where he was a professor in Warsaw University and was one of the most noted alienists in Europe, has examined Schidlofski and pronounces him insane.

"My husband is also a physician and a close friend of Dr. Goldszmit. We take his opinion in preference to that of Dr. Jelly, the State expert, and that of the prison physician, who says Schidlofski is sane. He is not sane. He is suffering from monomania and was insane when he committed the murder. All we ask is thirty days' reprieve in order that outside physicians may examine the condemned man. Dr. Jelly is prejudiced. So is the prison physician."

The programme for the Fourth which has been announced by the Board of Aldermen and the Common Council embraces a list of events covering the entire day. The official celebration begins with the civic addresses at 10:30 o'clock in Faneuil Hall. The programme follows:

In the evening, the electrical parade which aroused so much enthusiasm at Charlestown's June 17 celebration, will be repeated. HANDS LOOKED LIKE RAW BEEF

Terribly Inflamed, and Watery Matter Would Drop from Fingers—Had Doctor All Winter, But Grew Worse All the Time.

CURED BY CUTICURA AT EXPENSE OF $3.75

"My hands broke out with eczema. One of the best physicians in this section treated me all winter till the next spring, but I grew worse all the time. I tried everything I could hear of. At last in May my husband happened to be in the store and saw the Cuticura Remedies, and as a last resort bought them, Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent. I commenced taking them, and when I had used three bottles of the Resolvent and the Soap and Ointment to go with it, I was cured.

"My hands were so bad and inflamed they were purple and raw as meat, and when I held them down, watery matter would drop off the fingers. I used the Soap to bathe them in and applied the Ointment spread on linen cloths, in which I did them up. I did not have the doctor when I was taking Cuticura, but I began taking it in May, and before cold weather my hands were entirely healed. You may use this any way you please, and I hope it will help other sufferers as it did me. (signed) Mrs. Abbie A. Saultes, West Danville, Vt., April 19, 1905."

THREE PEERS OF THE TURF AT READVILLE

Sweet Marie 2:04¾, Tiverton 2:04½, Wentworth 2:04½! Which of the trio of great trotters will carry off the honors to-morrow in the big three-cornered match race at Readville?

Never before in the history of the harness turf has three such horses met. Since the match was made three months since the trainers of each have left nothing undone to bring their pupils to the wire in the acme of condition.

At that they all feel another workout would prove a benefit in having the horses keyed up to go the terrific clip required to head the summary. Each has plenty of speed, but it is always the pace that tells the story, and if one should weaken in the final drive in the homestretch it would be laid to not quite enough staving-up miles.

M'DONALD EXPECTS TO WIN.

Alta McDonald had the following to say:

"My mare Sweet Marie has had all done with her possible, and when the bell rings for her to face the starting judge I have faith she will race to suit the critics, her admirers and myself. It would be foolish for me to say that I am sure of winning. I will, however, declare I believe my chance is fully as good as the other two, and will be disappointed if defeated. In one way the weather worked against me. I calculated to give Marie her final fast work on Saturday, but the rain kept her in the stable. Then, too, the shower of yesterday forenoon once more kept her off the track. In this way I missed one workout."

Said John Howell: "I am particularly pleased with Tiverton. When I began training him in the Spring I was little afraid that he might develop the lameness which bothered him last season, but right to the present time he has never showed the slightest symptom of going wrong. He has done everything that I have asked him, and will go to the wire ready to hold up his end in the struggle. He may be beaten, but they have got to show me first. Till then I have a world of confidence in the result."

WENTWORTH GOING FAST.

Emerson McCargo's opinion: "There is no need of telling you I am going to win if possible, because there is no way of getting much money by riding behind, and that was never my game. Wentworth is in corking good shape. In his last workout he trotted the final quarter in fourteen seconds, and that was going some. Let me tell you right now, if defeated to-morrow it will be the last time those two will do it this season. The race will put him on edge so he will be invincible. When the race is over I think Wentworth will be on the top line of the summary."

Secretary Charley Jewett says that orders for tickets are pouring in from all parts of the country. Fully 10,000 people will be on hand, and possibly more.

NEED MONEY FOR REGATTA

WORCESTER, July 3.—For the expenses of the annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, scheduled for the lake for two days, beginning August 10, the Lake Quinsigamond Amateur Rowing Association has pledges of $1,657. The amount is several hundred dollars short of what the real expenses will be. The prizes for scullers and oarsmen, and banners for the clubs they represent, will alone cost as much as the amount pledged. Added to this is the expense of running the regatta, the expenses of the executive committee of the National Association for three days, the renting of quarters for the visiting oarsmen, and many other things, all of which cost money.

A considerable amount of hustling will have to be done in the next few weeks to insure the financial success of the regatta. The committee in charge of the arrangements is anxious to make the fund $2,000, that the regatta may be carried along properly and the people of Worcester furnished with rowing entertainment.

The money pledged will be collected before July 16, so that the committee may make plans according to the amount which is figured on. Subscriptions will be received by A. V. Collison, 340 Main street, who is secretary and treasurer of the regatta fund.

SCHOOLBOYS ON THE RIVER

For the first time in two weeks the all-Boston interscholastic eight-oar crew yesterday afternoon went out in its shell on the Charles River. After rowing over the course twice the crew had a conference with Coach Ten Eyck.

The crew, as it rowed yesterday and will row in the race to-morrow, is as follows: Wallis stroke (DeMeritte), Beard 7 (Cambridge Latin), Mason 6 (English High), Goodlett 5 (Cambridge Latin), Jewett 4 (Boston Latin), Hall 3 (Boston English High), Gray 2 (Cambridge Latin), Nay bow (Boston Latin), Daly coxswain (Boston Latin).

To Settle the World's Lightweight Supremacy Cartoonist Tad Urges

BATTLING NELSON TO FIGHT JOE GANS

BY TAD.

BATTLING NELSON versus JOE GANS. That's the fight that would make the eyes of the sports stick out—eh?

Billy Nolan, the Dane's manager, hit New York yesterday and announced that Bat would meet any one in the world at 133 pounds ringside. Now, whether Bill meant that Bat would fight Joe Gans at that notch is what is bothering a big bunch of us.

There is no reason in the world why Battling Nelson should not meet Joe Gans. Battling Nelson is the greatest white lightweight living—why shouldn't he meet the greatest black man at that weight?

It can't be that Nelson is afraid of Gans. He met the toughest boys of his weight in the world one after the other, and beat them as fast as they could be set up.

He is the strongest lightweight we have right now. He is young, strong, has a terrific wallop, is aggressive and can take a licking that would discourage another fellow. He has a record as grand as any lightweight of recent years and is just the sort of a man we would like to see against the "Master from Baltimore."

Drawing the color line is an awfully weak excuse. Nelson fought Black Griffo out West some years ago. He had no kick against color at that time. Why has he changed his mind if he refuses to meet Gans?

Joe Gans cannot last forever, Nelson. He has been in the ring now almost fifteen years. He has been beaten more than once, but still has you lightweights buffaloed. Dal Hawkins, Sam Langford, Willie Lewis and Frank Erne have beaten him. If they could lick him, why couldn't you? You have licked men who have beaten them. Gans is bound to be knocked out some day. There never was a champion who lasted forever. They all get it some time or other, and he's just as liable to get it now.

When some white boy does knock the colored wonder out all you fellows will be up here at the AMERICAN office with challenges and forfeits hollering your heads off for a chance to meet him. If that ever does happen I hope none of you color-line boys even get a peek at him.

Come on, Nelson, be a sport and take a chance. You have nothing to lose. You are no champion now, and if you beat Gans you will be heralded all over the world as the greatest lightweight of the age. Suppose you do lose. You are still the best white boy in the lightweight division. There is not a boy in the world who is better than a 10 to 5 chance with you.

Herrera, Britt, Hermann, McGovern, Hanlon, Erne or Corbett, none of them is in your class. Joe Gans is the man—go and get him. Toss that old color line gag over the fence and come out in the open. Be the best man of your weight in the world, bar none. There is no glory in being the best white man, that's just telling us that you fear the black one.

You'll have plenty of backers—let's see Gans in a good fight.

BRUSH WON'T LOSE SLEEP OVER TEAM

NEW YORK, July 2.—One would think that the pace at which the world's champions have been going of late would make President Brush, formerly of Cincinnati, lose some sleep and much weight. But it is not so. The owner of the Giants, after his experience with the Reds for many years, is not perturbed by such a little thing as a slump of the champions and lives in the brightest hope that there will be another banner added to the collection of silk trophies that have been handed to his team since he and McGraw began their partnership.

"Not only are we not worrying ourselves into medicine-taking condition," said President Brush, "but we also are not figuring on making any changes with a view of stopping the disaster that seemed to have struck us when the Chicagos took three out of four games from us.

"The fact is that we still have the best baseball team in America, and it remains only for them to get into condition. Ames, who had been doing our best pitching this season, is rapidly getting his lame ankle in shape. He has been laid up for nearly three weeks. Wiltse again is well; McGinnity promises to perform as well as ever before long; Taylor is there with the goods; Mathewson soon will be right—and when Mike Donlin's hurt ankle allows him to get back into the game we will go at just as merry a clip as we did last year."

LA CROIX HAS FAST STRING OF HORSES

One of the most successful driving clubs in this section is the Lynn. Comparatively a young organization yet, its growth in matinee circles has been rapid. It has a cozy clubhouse in the centre of the city, and has leased the Rockdale half-mile track in Peabody for the season.

This is an advance over last year, when the park was only engaged for a few matinees. It shows the interest of the members in the number of fast horses owned and being trained for the club's events.

In this respect President William LaCroix takes the lead. In charge of Trainer George Moore he has at the track Max C., 2:27¼, which was purchased last Fall for fun on the snow. There was little sleighing, but Mr. LaCroix has kept the gelding, as he is a very fast brush horse.

The three-year-old filly, Sally March, by Achille, 2:15¼, dam by Baron Wilkes, 2:18, has all of the marks of making a fast trotter. Then the pacing gelding Prospect Boy, by Blue Wilkes, 2:21, is showing up excellently in his work. Besides these Mr. LaCroix has in the stable of "Long Shot" Cox the pacing gelding Tiger, that has been a trial in 2:07¾ and has no record.

Some of the other prominent members are Martin J. Healey, Joseph Fadden, Robert Durland, A. B. Gardner, Frank Linehan, George Coakley, William Dynan, Ira Nador, Thomas Healey, George W. Belonga and Messrs. Fisher, Stafford and Wells.

CHICK FRASER EXPERT WITH THE LASSO

It is not generally known that the Reds have a cowboy novitiate on their team, and that during the coming Winter he hopes to develop into a regular ranchero. Chick Fraser, the twirler recently secured from Boston, is the pseudo knight of the lasso, and before another Spring training comes around the clever twirler expects to be so expert with the rope and the cayuse—said cayuse being a small Indian pony—that goes with the lariat, that he will enter some of the steer-roping competitions that are held in and around Marlin Springs, where the Reds again will do their preliminary work.

"I spent a goodly part of last Winter on Fred Clarke's ranch in Kansas," said Chick, "and there got next to the art of tossing the lasso over the head or hoofs of flying cattle. Clarke's brother has a large number of cattle, and on a certain day when there was to be a dehorning bee he allowed Fred and me to try our hands at lassoing steers. The first cast I made I got my noose right around the neck of a big boy, and in a moment he was on the ground. I was advised to quit right there and rest on my laurels; but ambition drove me on, and for some time after I looked like a fool in making wild tosses. Eventually, however, I got the knack of the thing, and another Winter at it will see me an expert. Clarke, by the way, is as successful with the lasso as he is in managing the Pittsburg team—and there are those that say that the Pirates will win the pennant again this season."

THREE STARS IN BIKE WORLD WILL CLASH

Three pace kings, Bobbie Walthour, Hugh MacLean and Jimmy Moran will meet at the Revere track tomorrow afternoon in a twenty-five mile race and the winner will be the acknowledged leader of the dangerous game. It's the greatest card of the year in the bike world, as it is seldom that such a trio come together to try conclusions, and there is so much rivalry among the professionals that the men will race their heads off in order to get the big end of the holiday purse.

Walthour, who poses as the head of the pace followers, will have his hands full trying to outride MacLean and Moran, who will make the effort of their lives to land the Southerner. As Bobbie sails for Europe shortly he will want his last race in America to be a victory and will be seen going at his best.

He has been up against tough propositions, but never faced anything harder than the combination of MacLean and Moran.

It will be Moran's first appearance since his return from abroad and Jimmy will get a big welcome from his numerous friends in Chelsea and the Hub. He would like nothing better than to take Walthour's scalp and says that he was never going better. It will also be a race within a race, as there is a lot of feeling between Moran and MacLean for the top honors, and they always have a hot argument when they meet on the track.

Not only is the race between the "big three" attracting attention, but that between Pat Logan, Elmer Collins of Lynn and J. B. Coffey of South Boston is of much interest.

Already more than twenty-five entries have been received for the two amateur events which will be held in addition to the above-named races, and the contests between the youngsters promise good sport.

DANIELS STILL WINNING.

LONDON, July 3.—The Bath Club international swimming contests were held yesterday at Dover. The 120-yard scratch race was won by C. M. Daniels of New York by one and one-half seconds, beating Cavill's record by one-fifth of a second. Cecil Healy, Australasia, was second and Z. De Halmoy, Budapest, was third.

WALCOTT BEAT PANTZ.

GLOUCESTER, July 3.—Belfield Walcott of Boston won the decision over Kid Pantz of Boston in a twelve-round go last night. Walcott was twelve or thirteen pounds heavier than Pantz, and landed much more effectively. The Kid took an awful beating and while he seemed to lead more, his blows were not clean.

WALTER CHRISTIE IN BIG CUP RACE

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Walter Christie has made his annual entry for the Vanderbilt team. He will be found at the start of the eliminatory contest in October. The car he enters this year is practically the same as that with which he established the mile record at Atlantic City and which was nothing more or less than his Florida car improved. There is probably no one man in this country who has tried more faithfully or persistently to produce a speed machine than has Christie. He has kept at this self-appointed task despite all failures or handicaps. The nearest to success he came was at Atlantic City, when he did do some phenomenal work.

In the Vanderbilt of a year ago Christie and his machine were substituted by the racing board for one of the three machines eliminated after the trials. He met with little or no success during the first two or three rounds. It was the Christie machine which collided with Lancia when the latter had the race well in hand, causing Lancia to lose the race and Christie to withdraw. At the Empire City track Christie recently drove the car in fifty-three seconds, equalling the circular track record held by Barney Oldfield.

It seems that the chief reason that the two steamers were not entered for the Vanderbilt Cup contest is the fact that their owners nominated them in the name of a Philadelphia club which is not affiliated with the A. A. A. For that reason the entry was declined. Entries for this event must be made in the name of an affiliated club, as stated in the entry blank. As a result of the rejection of these entries their owners feel decidedly aggrieved, as does also the Philadelphia club. Instead of making the entries in the name of the Cape May Club, which is a member of the A. A. A. and of which the owners of the two cars are members, the latter propose to fight the question and await a decision from Chairman Thompson of the racing board. The easiest way out of the trouble would be the best and productive of the desired results for the owners. They, however, do not see it that way and will institute a fight. In the meantime the entry list for the Vanderbilt is closed, and the steamers are without representation. They will remain so until the end of the chapter. The full list of entries for the race will be announced in a few days.

George W. Bennett is shortly to sever his connection as sales manager of the Thomas B. Jeffery Company to accept a similar position with the Knox Automobile Company of Springfield. Heretofore a strong fighter against the Selden patent, Mr. Bennett must now serve under its banner. As a thorough business man, actively alive to every interest of his concern, one ready and willing to work night and day if need be, Mr. Bennett has earned for himself an enviable name and reputation. While with the Rambler, he was ever to the fore fighting for what he deemed right. He had a faculty, some call it executive ability, to surround himself with the men who could produce the best results. The Rambler's loss is the Knox's gain.

The correct adjustment of the vibrator on the coil is an important matter, not only from the fact that a better spark is produced when the adjustment is right, but also because the current consumption depends to a considerable extent upon the swing of the little spring. A good rough-and-ready rule for the novice is to set the "buzzer" so that it sings the highest note that it can sustain clearly and without harshness. This can be done by first screwing down the adjusting screw until the buzz is stopped. Then gradually turn back until a high, clear buzz, without rattle or hoarseness, is obtained. With dry batteries it is sometimes necessary to slack back the screw a little more as the cells run down. It is, of course, possible to set the vibrator so that it will work fairly well whether the battery is brand new or in the last stages of its usefulness, and a majority of coils are so adjusted, but to make a new adjustment, or to get the best work out of the coils, the above method may be followed.

LARNED IS CHAMPION.

ORANGE, N. J., July 3.—The final match of the middle states lawn tennis championship tournament was won by W. L. Larned, who defeated W. J. Clothier of Philadelphia on the turf of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club here. The score was 4—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3.

ABE ATTELL IS FAVORITE OVER FRANKIE NEIL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 3.—Abe Attell is the ruling favorite in the big fight that is now the chief topic of conversation here. This champion featherweight is pretty generally picked to put Frankie Neil out of the way to-morrow at the Pacific A. C.

The two boys have finished their work in preparation for the go. Attell is feeling very spruce at Arcadia, where he has been putting in some hard hours at the preliminary exercise. The champion feels very confident of the result, as he has much science to back his speed and skill. Attell, in fact, has done very little worrying about this mill.

Neil has some very good fights to his credit, but his style of fighting is quite distinct from that of Attell. Neil's endurance and punishing power are his main assets. He has never been rated as a scientific fighter, and each time that he has been pitted against a man of crafty tactics he has found trouble. Attell, on the other hand, is possessed of all the science Attell lacks.

The punitive ability of the latter can easily be withstood by a fighter of Attell's efficient defensive methods. Besides that, Attell's punch, which has been drilled to reach its mark, is fully capable of wearing down the endurance of Neil.

The difference in the two styles of fighting was well expressed by one of the fans who favors Attell.

"Neil," said this fan, "relies principally upon his power of resistance. He is able to keep his punch working all the time, and thus manages to keep his adversary on defence a great deal of the time. Attell, however, backed by his science, can combine a good defence with a rapid-fire attack, and on that basis he is better than his opponent."

CLAN-NA-GAEL FIELD DAY

A crowd of 30,000 is expected at the monster field day of the Clan-Na-Gael to be held to-morrow at Oak Island Grove, Revere. The entry of Patrick Fitzgerald, the champion cross-country runner of Ireland, has been received by the athletic committee, and the foremost runner of Erin's Isle announces that he will try and lower the record for the mile and half-mile runs.

D. J. Mahoney is willing to wager any amount that he can break the world's record with the weights, and Tom Keene, who says that to-morrow will be his last public appearance on the cinders, announces that he will make a new record that will stand. Then there'll be baseball, football, hurling, music and dancing, and a program that will long be remembered by all who attend.

The committee in charge of the Clan Na Gael field day at Oak Island Grove, Revere, to-morrow, have received the entry of Patrick Fitzgerald, champion cross-country runner of Ireland, who is here specially to compete in the mile and half-mile runs, on the invitation of the clans. He is a member of the Douglas Club of County Cork, Ireland, and has the fastest record ever made by the club. D. J. Mahoney is willing to wager that he will break the world's record in the hammer throwing, and Tom Keene announces this as his last race and intends to make a new record. Lewis Guertin is very anxious to get a side bet for any amount, Bobby Baker preferred. The baseball team of Local 25, Teamsters' Union, the Highland A. A., the Holy Name Club of St. Vincent's parish, South Boston, and the Suffolks of Dorchester will contest for the baseball championship. The Garryowens and the Kickhams will compete for the football, and the Young Shamrocks of South Boston and the Young Irelands of Cambridge will play in the hurling match. WASHINGTON, July 3.—Another hot day is promised at the American League Park by the weather man. This looks encouraging to the Pilgrims, for Big Bill Dinneen is right in his element when the sun is burning hot and the thermometer is high in the 90's. That's when he works above par. Dinneen and Young are two hot weather men, the latter showing by his work yesterday when he kept the Senators guessing which way the next one was going to turn over.

When Winter and Glaze began to get affected by the heat in the second game the Senators began to run bases. Seventeen times was it necessary for the local bunch to circle the four corners. Altizer, out of three registered times at the bat, scored five runs, all on one hit. Every man in the second game found it necessary to do his little sprint round, some twice or more.

Two games, of course, are scheduled to be played to-morrow.

SPLENDID RACING ON TAP AT SALEM

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

The New Englanders Breeders' Club is endeavoring to give racing of a class commensurate with the surroundings. Some of the very best horses in the country have engagements in the State and the leading owners have entered their horses freely. The New England Handicap was a brilliant spectacle. It was won by Lotus Eater. Lotus Eater gave promise as a 2-year-old of being a genuine champion. He won the Triumph Stakes as a 2-year-old with consummate ease over the Brighton Beach course, running a mile in 1.41, and easily defeating Inquisitor, who won the Sheepshead Bay Handicap last Friday at Sheepshead Bay, Kuroki, Mydas and others. On the opening date at Rockingham Park Lotus Eater defeated Grapple, the winner of the Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont Park, West Tongorder and others in the fast time of 1.53 for the distance.

Lotus Eater will be a starter in the Stock Exchange Stakes on the Fourth of July, when he will meet a good field of opponents in a mile contest that promises to be a fierce battle for supremacy. In addition to the Stock Exchange Stakes there will be five other races, every one of which give promise of exciting contests.

The indications point to an immense throng of spectators. Already applications are arriving for boxes and advantageous locations from Boston, Worcester, Lowell, Haverhill, Lawrence, Concord, Manchester-by-the-Sea and the summer resorts of the North Shore. Many horses are arriving and the stable capacity of the club will be put to a test. Applications indicate that the 500 stalls will be filled on Monday next. This insures an abundance of first-class sport for Boston and the entire East.

The liberality of the management and their efforts to please as well as to conform to the desires and wishes of the authorities should arouse the citizens of New Hampshire to make every effort to establish the "sport of kings" on a firm basis in the East.

Moreover, the management in their liberality and desire to attract the best to this community have decided to put on a series of amateur contests to which purses and plate will be added. The first of these will be announced in the near future.

The following well-known gentlemen have signified their intention to ride in these contests, who represent the Country Club and the amateur interests of cross-country and flat racing in the East, and have requested the stewards of the club to give this class of sports to the Eastern public:

A. Henry Higginson, South Lincoln, Mass.
R. B. Baker, Waltham, Mass.
H. W. Smith, Worcester, Mass.
L. A. Shaw, Chestnut Hill, Mass.
R. J. McQuillan, Dedham, Mass.
C. S. Bird, Jr., East Walpole, Mass.
J. L. Chamberlain, South Lincoln, Mass.
George Lamson, Weston, Mass.

This will insure contests equal to the Amateur Cup at Saratoga or Belmont Park.

Seen Here and There at the Salem Track

BY EDWARD COGSWELL.

The gloom of Saturday has to a great extent disappeared. With the announcement that the meeting would continue as scheduled the horsemen looked cheerful.

William Myer had it straight when he said that in all of his experience the Salem track was the quickest to dry out of any. It rained there the night before, yet when the horses went to the post for the opening race it was in very good shape.

By the way, this is the same Billy Myer who hailed from Streator, Ill., and was prominent in the ring several years ago through winning some clever fights over the best men in his country and fighting a long draw with Jack McAuliffe. Later he became interested in the running tracks and now ranks on the top as superintendent.

E. E. Davies, of the Watch and Ward League, was on hand during the afternoon. When he showed up there was a great craning of necks to look him over, as the reputation that he was the person who had stopped racing in Massachusetts had preceded him. He said that he was on a pleasure trip. It would be hard to find where he could harm the Salem track people at the present time.

Another looking over the sights was the Rev. Mr. Blake of Manchester, N. H. He is one of the "twelve apostles" who have worked overtime for so long to put the track out of commission. He took a seat in the grandstand right after arriving and remained there an interested spectator during the afternoon.

"Talk about narrow-minded people," said a man who went up to the track the day before the opening last week, "but those New Hampshire Puritans are the limit. Just this side of Salem the railroad runs along the side of Rockingham Park. 'There is the new race track,' called out some one in the car, and a young lady who was sitting on the other side of the car left her seat to take a look at it. She was immediately taken to task by her mother, who jawed her in the most outrageous fashion for daring to even look at the track."

With the management so liberal most of the horsemen will remain till the close of the meeting. Enoch Wishard, one of the best known trainers in the country, who has John A. Drake's horses, will be in line till the opening of Saratoga. His horses have been campaigning steadily since the Aqueduct session.

John Hynes will return to New York with his modest stable. He declares that he has had enough of the bushes. Hereafter if he finds that his runners are not good enough to win over the New York tracks he will sell them and wait for more prosperous times. So far as learned he is the only trainer going away.

Admirers of the trotter are apt to think training runners costs much less than harness horses. John Cheney, who has trained both, says that the expense differs very little. Exercise boys, jockeys, their valets, etc., are no small item.

Some Batting Surprises Among

SIX STAR BATSMEN

NEW YORK, July 3.—Who will lead the National League batsmen this year?

Will it be Harry Steinfeldt, the ex-Red; Fred Schulte, the clever right fielder of the Chicagos; Hans Wagner, the slugger of the Pirates, Frank Chance, manager of the Cubs; Cy Seymour, the present world's champion hitter; Mike Donlin, who finished up near the top last season, or some dark horse?

There is no doubt that the batting surprises of the year have been furnished by Steinfeldt, Schulte and Seymour—the two first named because of their improved form and the latter because of the slump he has taken, thanks to having no batsmen of force to support him. Schulte was considered a fair sticker last season, so that the form he has shown so far this year is somewhat of a surprise. However, he is a youngster whose work has been much better than it was last year, and for that reason his improvement in batting is a natural evolution, and one that may land him at the top of the heap. Steinfeldt's penchant in years past has been to start off fine with the stick and then fall off about the middle of the season. However, this year he is setting a faster pace than ever in all departments, and the impetus may carry him through the entire season as a star. Chance is not allowing the cares of management to bear on his batting, and seems to be doing better than ever with the stick. Wagner is going the usual speed, while Donlin's bad ankle is liable to keep him out of the honor class. But it is almost certain that the class will be headed by one of the six men named.

BIG AUTO RACES ON AT CHICAGO

By Boston American Leased Wire.

HAWTHORNE RACE TRACK, Chicago, Ill., July 3.—Auto enthusiasts to the number of 3,000 were out here this afternoon to witness the first day's racing under the auspices of the Western Automobile Racing Association. Threatening weather kept many away but the opening was auspicious, nevertheless.

If the weather man is at all kind it is expected that all records for attendance and racing will be broken to-morrow when the principal events are to be run off.

With the endurance contest of fifty miles as the feature of the first day's racing, six events were on the program to-day. The International Derby at fifty miles was expected to bring out some close competition, as such daring autoists as Barney Oldfield, Jerry Ellis, Dr. Weinstraub, J. B. Deibler, Otis Friend, George Crane, A. C. Webb, W. G. Mead and G. G. Lathy came to participate in the run.

As an extra attraction Barney Oldfield will go after several records. The marks he will attempt to lower are those made at Harlem last year. He will go after the three-mile mark particularly.

Besides these events, the following contests will take place: Five miles for cars listing over $1,000 to $2,000; five miles for cars listing over $2,000; Hawthorne handicap, free for all; Illinois sweepstakes, five miles, free to all.

STAR ATHLETES TO COMPETE TO-MORROW

It's a great day of sport for the Knights of St. Brenden at Harbor View athletic grounds on Dorchester avenue to-morrow.

In the morning there will be baseball. At noon hurling matches. Then at 2:30 o'clock the amateur athletic games will start, and all the local stars and many outsiders are entered.

In the 100-yard dash Bill Eaton is on scratch, with Ford of Harvard, Bell, the Englishman, and Connolly, the schoolboy champ, with low marks. Tom Cronin, the Athens competitor, will be in the broad jump, and Dick Grant is in the five-mile run with Jimmy Lee, another flyer.

Bill Coe, the champion of the world shotputter, will perform in the shot with a hard field to beat, including Ellery Clark.

The Gaelic games occur after the track sport.

COTE DID NOT SHOW UP.

SOUTH BERWICK, Me., July 3.—Arthur Cote failed to appear last night, so the bout scheduled with Rudolph Unholz was not held. A large crowd was disappointed.

CHICAGO PROTECTS UMPIRES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The umpires of Chicago from now on are to be safe from the flying pop bottles of deadly aim, likewise from brickbats and various other missiles that make their lives burdens when the "fan" is in his glory of denunciation. Last night the council passed the following:

"No person shall throw or place upon any baseball park, athletic field or other place where games are played, any bottle or other glass receptacle, or any broken bottle or other broken thing or instrument."

The penalty for disobedience of the edict is a fine of from $25 to $200.

WRAY GOES TO DETROIT.

Jim Wray, coach of the Harvard varsity crew, left Cambridge last night for Detroit, where he will coach the Detroit boat club during the Summer. Wray will again have charge of the Harvard crews next Fall, returning to Cambridge about the first of October to begin the Fall varsity rowing.

WEST IS BEATEN.

HENLEY, Eng., July 3.—The Argonauts (Canada) beat First Trinity, Cambridge, yesterday, in the first heat for the Grand Challenge Cup. Time, 7m. 26s.

In the preliminary heat for the Diamond Sculls Ray Adam of Australia beat W. B. West of Philadelphia by two and one-quarter lengths. West led for a quarter of a mile. Time, 9m. 21s.

ARGONAUTS WIN AGAIN

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, July 3.—In the second heat for the grand challenge cup, which was rowed to-day in the annual regatta, the Argonaut eight of Toronto, Can., beat the Thames Club easily. The first heat, rowed yesterday, was also captured by the Argonaut eight. They defeated the First Trinity, Cambridge, by a scant length.

MELLODY HAS JOB TO BEAT LEWIS

Honey Mellody is going to scrap. That announcement is sufficient, as there is magic in the Charlestown slugger's name to the local ring followers when he gets into action with the mitts. And Honey doesn't know what a defeat means, so when he tackles Willie Lewis of New York at the Lincoln A. C. to-morrow night he does not intend to let the Manhattan boy make a dent in his career.

There are many who hesitate when sizing up Honey's chances with Lewis, as the latter knows even more than Honey about the inside of the ring, and when it comes to hitting powers Lewis is always there with the wallop.

Mellody is the pride of the Hub just now and is readily rated as the best welterweight in the country. He could not be recognized as the crude fighter of a few years ago as he shows the finish of the great gladiators in ringdom and is certainly wonderfully clever with his fists.

But its his great striking ability which has won him estimation of the local ring's patrons and they know that when he once starts out to get to his man, as he always does, that the other fellow must be able to fight him back at his own game or go under at an early stage.

Lewis has faced some of the best men in the country and does not intend letting Mellody tamper with his reputation. He certainly is the most worthy opponent who has faced Honey in the big Chelsea arena and it will be a rugged mill from end to end.

Joe Geary wants to show his friends that he can lick Jerry Gaines and has his chance in the semi-final bout of eight rounds.

Young Cahill and Johnny Sheenan, two fast boys, will open the show.

The first bout will be called at 8 o'clock and out of town members will have plenty of time to see the whole of the fifteen rounds in the main bout and catch their trains.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Boston, July 3.—There was a bigger rush of fans through the clickers to-day as they wanted to see some more heartbreaking games like that of yesterday, and were satisfied that the Phillies was a combination which would size up with the Tenneyites and make a good diamond comparison for nine sessions.

It was a sore bunch of Quakers because they got nipped in the last ditch when they considered that they had the game well in hand.

They were feeling in the right mood to make a better fight for the second contest and Duffy never made them work harder, for if there is one team he would like to smother on the circuit it is the Hub boys.

Duffey's numerous Hub friends rubbed it in on the genial manager, but he said he would get even before his braves left town.

Gus Dorner was picked by Tenney to officiate, and Gus was on hand with his finest assortment. Duffey was undecided about his boxman, and had Duggleby limber up with his string of young talent.

Johnny Bates, the hero of the 1 to 0 game, took his honors modestly, but the fans did not forget his great batting ability.

TWO OF THE NEWEST SMART JACKETS OF LIGHT SILK AND DAINTIEST LACE

Height of Fashion for Wear Over Light Gowns

LITTLE lace and silk coats which are so fashionable now over lingerie dresses are cut in many styles and shapes. These are two of the newest.

The Eton jacket is of mustard green (the very newest color) taffeta. It is made without seams, joined by large pearl buttons holding the points in place under the arms. Near the edge is embroidered a heavy design in rosebuds in the deeper shades of pink. Worn with a white dress and white hat trimmed with roses it makes a most up-to-date costume.

The lace coat is the short pony cut in the back with long fronts. It is equally pretty made of embroidery, and worn with a white linen skirt makes a jaunty afternoon costume.

Choose Your Environment

IT will make all the difference in the world to you whether you are with people who are watching for ability in you, people who believe in, encourage and praise you, or whether you are with those who are forever breaking your idols, blasting your hopes and throwing cold water on your aspirations.

HOW TO PUT ON GLOVES.

OPEN and turn back the gloves to the thumb and powder lightly. Put the fingers in their places, not the thumb, and carefully work them on with the first finger and thumb of the other hand until they are quite down; never press between the fingers. Pass the thumb into its place with care, and work on as the fingers. Turn back the glove and slide it over the hand and wrist, never pinching the kid, and work the glove into proper place by means of the lightest pressure, always allowing the kid to slide between the fingers. In finishing care should be taken in fastening the first button.

THANKS FOR FOOD

A PRETTY table observance in Danish families is for children, even little ones who can scarcely toddle, to go gravely after dinner to salute their parents and say, "Tak for mad" ("Thanks for the meal"). Even visitors shake hands with their host and hostess and go through the same formality. In German families that hold to tradition the same custom prevails. When the evening meal is ended, the party stand up around the table and each shakes hands with the neighbor, saying "Gasegnete Mahlzeit" blessing the food.

THE IMMODESTY OF THE UP-TO-DATE SHIRTWAIST

Don't Display Too Many Ribbons to Public Gaze

By Beatrice Fairfax.

GIRLS, you'd be highly scandalized if you saw a woman walking up Washington street in tights or a bathing suit or clad in petticoat and underwaist, wouldn't you?

And yet you go out in costumes which are quite as unsuitable for the street as any of those mentioned.

A skirt which clings tightly about your figure is almost as bad as tights, and equally suggestive.

There is little difference between going out without any stockings and wearing filmy openwork stockings, which, when worn with short skirts, display the ankles all too freely.

And as for some of the shirtwaists worn in public you might just as well have no waist on at all.

Have as many pink and blue ribbons in your underwaists as you please, but don't display them to the eye of the public.

You might as well put your underwaist on outside your dresswaist, and be done with it.

Don't labor under the idea that men admire this unnecessary display of lingerie.

They don't. They simply think it immodest.

The gauzy, transparent waists that are worn this Summer are no covering at all.

They merely serve to draw attention to the wearer's arms and neck and beribboned undergarments.

"What's the matter with the women this year?" said a man to me the other day. "They all look as though they were just ready to do a day's washing with their sleeves rolled up and their collars rolled down. Surely they don't imagine such a costume pretty or suitable for street wear. The men all think those waists immodest. What would the women think of us if we went around with sleeves above our elbows and our collars turned away down?"

I fancy that man voiced the opinions of most men.

AN UNNECESSARY DISPLAY OF LINGERIE

If you must wear all-over lace and embroidery waists, wear some sort of a lining with them.

The men make fun of a good many of our fashions. We have grown used to their good-natured banter and comfort ourselves with the thought that they don't know what they are talking about.

But we must not get used to their calling us immodest, and that is what they will do as long as we give them such excellent cause by following some of the present fashions.

You do not see the well-dressed woman wearing these apologies as waists.

She wears a low-necked gown in the evening in the privacy of her own home or the home of a friend.

She would not dream of going in the street with her neck and arms exposed, as they would be by one of the transparent "peek-a-boo" waists.

Conspicuous dressing is never good dressing.

The well-bred, well-dressed woman dresses modestly and quietly for the street. She saves her frills and furbelows for the house.

Don't think for one moment, girls, that you are making yourselves more attractive by wearing these transparent garments.

Not one man in a dozen but what thinks the less of you for your lack of modesty.

If you went in the streets in your bathing suit or without your dresswaist you would be arrested for being improperly clothed.

They might arrest you with quite as much justice when you go about clad in your cobwebby waist and openwork stockings, for certainly they are not proper or fit garments to wear in public.

THE TIGHTLY-CLINGING SKIRT

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

CHAPTER LXII.—Continued

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"I AM Inspector Callahan of the detective squad; this is my warrant card. I understand you to say that the Herries diamond is missing?"

"Yes, and this scoundrel stole it!" cried the distracted jeweller, wringing his hands and glaring furiously at the dark-complexioned man whose wrist was being bound up by the drug clerk. "If it's lost, I'm ruined!"

Into a Cab

"No, no! but by ze saints, zat is not true, illustrious. I spik nozzing but ze true! Search me illustrious, search me!" vociferated the accused to Callaghan, with a wealth of gesticulation on the part of the hand already bound up. "Oh, mine poor vife, Bautista! Her leetle Peppino, zay say he ees a tief!"

The newcomer looked at the screaming man hard for a moment with his cool, scrutinizing gaze, and without saying a word passed his hand lightly over the man's clothing.

"I believe you're right, Mr. Arthan, though I expect he has passed a stone to a confederate. In my opinion this is all a put-up thing," Callaghan said to the jeweler, "and that he deliberately smashed the window. This thing was all part of the stock-in-trade," and he tapped the hurdy-gurdy, "to make a safe passage through the glass for his body. Why I think so is that I fancy this is the man we've been wanting to lay our hands on for some time. Ah, would you——"

He gripped the pseudo Italian's hands in a quick, tight grasp, as the latter made a sudden, swift step as if preparatory to an attempt to bolt. Something bright flashed into his hands, there was a sharp click, a pair of handcuffs had been snapped on to Freddy's wrists.

"You're coming to the police station, my fine fellow," he added, as the constable returned with a cab.

At this announcement, and with the handcuffs on his wrists, the prisoner's cries and gesticulations became more frenzied. The sympathies of a crowd are almost invariably with the wrong person; two compassionate female voices cried out "Shame!" and "Brute!" as the grimly smiling Callaghan led his prisoner to the cab, the patrol man having cleared a way through the crowd.

"Stop that!" said Inspector Callaghan sharply to the screaming prisoner. "You, sir," to Mr. Arthan, "follow us as soon as possible. The man will be searched there. First you must ascertain how much of your property is missing——"

Perhaps a Mistake

"Pardon me, but I am sure there is some mistake," interposed another voice, as the detective was putting his prisoner into the cab.

Callaghan turned sharply at the interruption. A man in the distinctive garb of a priest was standing at his elbow.

"I can vouch for this man, Peppino Ventura," cried the priest. "I know him; he and his wife are both honest, hard working people."

"I think I know you. You are Father Carriere?" The priest inclined his head. "I am afraid, Father, you are mistaken. I have every ground for believing this man to be a regular crook whom we've long wanted to lay our hands on——"

"But it was a sheer accident," pleaded the priest. "This poor Italian slipped on a piece of orange peel that had just been carelessly dropped by a workingman——"

Callaghan took him up quickly.

"Oh, dropped ready, was it? Does any one happen to know which way that man went? Officer, you hear that? Because ten to one he was an accomplice!"

The patrolman, with great appearance of zeal, at once made inquires among the crowd, but the man in question appeared to have vanished.

"But, inspector," cried the priest, as Callaghan followed the evidently cowed prisoner into the cab, "I assure you I know the man well. He is an organ grinder. I've known him and his wife for years. They live not far from here, in the Cherry Hill section."

"Well, I'll call there to make inquiries on my way to the station, but you'll find he has deceived you, Father," said Mr. Callaghan, grimly.

"Shall I come with you?" the patrolman asked officiously, before shutting the cab door.

Behind the Door

"No," said Callaghan. He added to the jeweller: "You'll follow us to Mulberry street, Mr. Arthan, as soon as you've discovered the extent of your loss."

The cab drove off.

"And now," said Mrs. Knightsbridge, tartly, to Mr. Arthan, who was looking worried out of his wits, "after all this trumpery fuss about a broken window, which I still maintain was a sheer accident, perhaps you will be good enough to finish showing me those bracelets—or shall I go elsewhere?"

Which was perhaps a little unreasonable on her part.

The departing cab bore off the man from headquarters and his prisoner; one or two boys in the crowd ran after it for a little while, but they speedily wearied of the chase and dropped behind.

The cabman was directed to drive to a street of squalid, huddled-up houses in Cherry Hill section. Except for a few children playing in the gutters the street was deserted.

At No. 63 the cab stopped.

The inspector and his prisoner got out. One of the dejected-looking Italian's wrists was handcuffed, the other half of the steel links Callaghan held, very unostentatiously, so as not to attract attention; but it struck the cabman that possibly the man from Mulberry street might have been wiser to have brought the policeman with him, in case of an attempted rescue.

"Howsumever," the cabman reflected, "it ain't no business o' mine if some o' these fly cops is a bit too fly an' cocksure sometimes!"

"Wait for us," said Callaghan briefly to the cabman. "You keep your mouth shut," he added sharply to his prisoner, who showed signs of breaking out anew into lamentations and protestations of his innocence.

Callaghan knocked at the door of No. 63; the cabman, watching, saw him open it and pass inside, still holding the Italian's arm. The door closed again.

CHAPTER LXIII.

Freddy's Reception

THE door closed upon the detective and his prisoner. On his box the cabman sat muttering to himself, a Jehu of the usual type; top hat, coat with big buttons and florid of face.

"Jest my luck!" he grumbled to himself, as he waited with growing impatience.

"Never found a cop yet was a good fare. They jest pay you yer legal rate and pinch you at that if you give 'em any lip. Mighty long time they are. Rather queer, too, I call it."

The headquarters man and his prisoner were so long that after a while the cabman descended from his box and walked up to the door of No. 63. He could hear no sound within.

"Very queer indeed!" he added, with more emphasis. He waited a little longer; then he knocked. No answer.

A lad passed down the street and paused to cry out:

"Ain't no one living there, boss. You can knock till you're blue in the face and you won't git no answer!"

"Empty?" echoed the cabman with a changing countenance. "Oh, that's it, is it?"

He tried the door.

It was locked inside.

The cabman knelt and peered through the keyhole, obtaining a view of a narrow bare passage and uncarpeted stairs. And there at the foot of the stairs he saw a brass-bound hurdy-gurdy and a little heap of clothes unmistakably those which Mr. Callaghan's prisoner had been wearing when he entered the house.

"Darn me if it isn't a clean beat," the cabman ejaculated. Then a slow smile dawned on his angry face. "But, come to think, I don't know if it wasn't worth it. Neatest put-up job I ever see in all my natural. Took me in, and I'm pretty fly. Strikes me they'll have to wait a long time at the station for that Eyetalian!"

The cabman was perfectly right in his conclusion that Mr. Arthan, the jeweller, hurrying to the police station, would have to wait a long time for the Italian hurdy-gurdy man.

For there was a back way out of No. 63, and through that back way Mr. Freddy Delamere was hurrying, divested of the curly black wig that he had worn over his own short-cropped hair, and the clothes in which he had "dressed the part" of the street musician.

He emerged by the back, looking another person altogether, with the stain washed off his face and in his own every day attire.

A Clever Trick

From motives of prudence he and the pseudo-detective, who really bore a remarkable resemblance, sufficient to deceive the patrolman utterly, to that well-known detective had parted company. Freddy made his way alone through the back yard into the narrow alley behind, and into the street.

He felt as though he were walking on air.

In broad daylight he had actually abstracted the world-famous diamond from a Maiden lane window and so cleverly that he had got clear away and his tracks covered, leaving the police utterly at fault as to the identity of the man who had carried out this daring scheme.

Freddy felt so proud of his achievement that he was hardly willing to concede any of the credit of the successful venture to [illegible], whose brain had planned the details, or to the other confederates who had played their parts.

He rather wondered why the man who had dropped the orange peel had hung about him so long and had pressed his arm meaningly several times while Arthan was [illegible] him.

Since he had already passed the stone while lying in the shop window, what had the man wished to convey?

The Girl No Man Cares for

THE kind of girl who expects her path to be strewn with bouquets, chocolates, theatre tickets and treats generally will find her popularity short-lived, no matter how charming she may be.

The average young man's pocket cannot stand the strain long, and he will turn to some other girl less attractive, perhaps, but who will be content with the attentions he can afford to bestow on her.

It is a girl's place to see that the expenses a young man incurs for her pleasure shall not exceed what he can easily afford.

When he eventually finds that she cares only for the amusements that cost him money he will begin to withdraw and to seek some girl who will be an agreeable companion on a less expensive scale.

The ideal girl has work to do which keeps her busy, whets her appetite for holiday pleasures and gives her a knowledge of the value of money. And she does not spend that of others without remembering how difficult it is to get.

The Thrifty Housewife Is Busy With Her Preserves These Days

Valuable Suggestions for Putting Up Fruits and Berries as They Come in Season

THE season for preserving fruit lasts all through the Summer, each fruit coming in due season. The process of canning and preserving different kinds of fruit varies little, except in the amount of sugar used.

None but perfectly sound and fresh fruit should be chosen for this purpose.

The fruit should not be cooked sufficiently long to destroy its natural flavor, and while boiling hot should be sealed in air-tight jars, filled to overflowing to exclude every particle of air, and then quickly sealed.

The jars should be thoroughly heated before filling, filled through a wide-mouthed funnel, and should, during this process, stand on a folded damp towel to prevent breakage.

After screwing on the tops tightly stand the jars in a warm part of the kitchen over night. In the morning give the tops another turn, wipe off the jars and put them away in a cool place.

Small fruits are best sugared one or two hours before cooking. They should be brought just to the boiling point, skimmed and sealed immediately.

The surplus juice that exudes from strawberries and plums may be strained and boiled for jelly.

By following these directions and using the quantities given in the recipes that follow success is sure:

WHOLE BERRIES

Buy the fruit when not too ripe, pick over immediately, wash if absolutely necessary and put in glass jars, filling each one about two-thirds full.

Put in the preserving kettle a pound of sugar and one cupful of water for every two pounds of fruit, and let it come slowly to a boil. Pour this syrup into the jars over the berries, filling them up to the brim; then set the jars in a pot of cold water on the stove and let the water boil and the fruit become scalding hot. Now take them out and seal perfectly tight. If this process is followed thoroughly the fruit will keep for several years.

PINEAPPLE PRESERVES

Twist off the top and bottom, and pare off the rough outside of pineapples; then weigh them and cut them in slices, chips or quarters, or cut them in four or six, and shape each piece like a whole pineapple; to each pound of fruit put a teacupful of water; put it in a preserving kettle, cover it and set it over the fire, and let them boil gently until they are tender and clear; then take them from the water by sticking a fork in the centre of each slice, or with a skimmer into a dish.

Put to the water white sugar, a pound for each pound of fruit; stir until it is all dissolved; then put in the pineapple, cover the kettle, and let them boil gently until transparent throughout; when it is so, take it out, let it cool, and put it in glass jars; let the syrup boil or simmer gently until it is thick and rich, and when nearly cool pour it over the fruit. The next day secure the jars, as before directed.

Pineapple done in this way is a beautiful and delicious preserve. The usual manner of preserving it, by putting it into the syrup without first boiling it, makes it little better than sweetened leather.

CRANBERRIES

The cranberries must be large and ripe. Wash them, and to six quarts of cranberries allow nine pounds of the best loaf sugar. Take three quarts of the cranberries and put them into a stew pan with a pint and a half of water. Cover the pan and boil or stew them until they are all to pieces. Then squeeze the juice through a jelly bag. Put the sugar into a preserving kettle, pour the cranberry juice over it and let it stand until it is all melted, stirring it up frequently. Then place the kettle over the fire and put in the remaining three quarts of whole cranberries. Let them boil till they are tender, clear and of a bright color, skimming them frequently. When done put them warm into jars with the syrup, which should b like a thick jelly.

APPLE BUTTER

Boil one barrel of new cider down hal peel and core three bushels of good coo ing apples; when the cider has boiled half the quantity, add the apples, a when soft, stir constantly for from eig to ten hours. If done it will adhere an inverted plate. Put away in stone ja (not earthern ware), covering first wit writing paper cut to fit the jar, and pre down closely upon the apple butter; cove the whole with thick brown paper snugl tied down.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

RATHER UNREASONABLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a man thirty years of age and reside in Denver, Col. Last July I met a young lady from Brooklyn who was visiting relatives in my city, and we became engaged to be married in June, with her parents' consent, and I came on to New York for the happy event. On June 3 we had a public reception, and on June 5 her parents, for no plausible reason, withdrew their consent to our union, stating that they had nothing at all against my character and reputation, but they could not have their only daughter leave them and go away so great a distance.

We love each other dearly, but the young lady does not wish to marry against her parents' wishes.

I would marry her even against her parents' wishes, but she does not wish to listen to an elopement.

I do not know what to do, as if I decide to remain in Brooklyn I would have to begin over again, whereas if I remain in Denver her parents will never consent to our marriage.

The young lady is twenty-three years of age and old enough to choose for herself.

D. G.

HER parents are unreasonable to break the match unless they have some very good reason. Of course, it is hard to have their only daughter go so far away, but they can't expect to keep her always. They should have thought all that over before they gave their consent in the first place. Naturally, the girl could not wish to hurt them by eloping, but if she really loves you she should talk seriously with her parents and let them see that it will make her very unhappy to give you up. Perhaps if she does so they will relent.

TOO YOUNG TO MARRY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of seventeen, and have been going with a gentleman about five months who is twenty. I have learned to love this young man dearly and he confessed his love for me a number of times. Do you think this young man loves me, as he has asked me to marry him, but he says we will have to wait a couple of years, as we are both too young, and he wants to wait until he makes more money.

BRIGHT EYES.

I THINK the young man is right. You are both too young to marry for a few years yet. His asking you to wait is no sign he does not love you. He is very sensible in wanting to make a good living before he marries.

LAKIN'S HEDAKE KOLONE

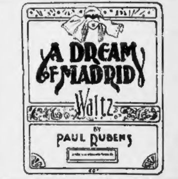
50c. WALTZ, ONLY 10c.



Every one loves a sweet, dreamy, musical waltz, especially if it has that nervously sweeping Spanish rhythm of "A Dream of Madrid"—one of the finest waltzes for piano composed in years. "A Dream of Madrid" has a bewitchingly sweet waltz melody that recalls all the charm of that wonderful Spanish touch in "Carmen"—except that this waltz by Mr. Rubens is easy, very easy. This regularly listed 50c. piece is printed in beautiful color on richly enamelled paper. It is sold at the special 10c. price as a means for introducing our new, big 1906 Music Catalogue, and we offer this regularly listed 50c. piece for five days at the 10c. price to secure the addresses of bona fide music purchasers. To secure this beautiful 50c. waltz for only 10c., fill out the coupon below and enclose a dime NOW, before you forget it.

TEACHERS PACK TRUNKS FOR EUROPEAN TRIP

Winners in Boston American Contest Warned to Be at Steamers on Time.

VICTORS TELL FRIENDS' AID

"How it was done by our friends" is the topic that the teachers who won in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S European tour contest are discussing as they prepare, twenty of them, or one-half of the delegation, to depart next Thursday for abroad.

This teacher tells how her boys got together in a sort of club and worked day and night collecting votes.

Another informs you of how her brother, father and her male friends planned together to corral all the BOSTON AMERICAN coupons there were in town.

In the meantime they are packing trunks and preparing for the great event. Next Thursday they become acquainted with each other aboard the White Star line steamship Arabic, one of the very finest ships that goes out of Boston.

Every one of the teachers is anticipating a glorious time. That they are happy at the idea of winning the great contest is shown by the letters and telegrams that come to this office.

Joyous Telegrams.

Beatrice May of St. Johnsbury, Vt., who won one of the Grand Tour places, wired the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"Great expectations realized. Delighted at the prospect. Accept many thanks. Sorry all could not be winners."

This is from W. May Nash of No. 506 Columbus avenue, who is one of the Shakespearian Tour winners:

"Miss Nash acknowledges the receipt of the glad tidings concerning the contest. Your paper will not easily be forgotten by the forty happy New England teachers. This contest will help me personally to partially realize an ambition 'pent up' for three years. I look forward to my trip through the courtesy of the BOSTON AMERICAN with the liveliest enthusiasm. I think we kept your counting room force hard at it.'"

And this from Newburyport:

"Such rejoicing in the little town of Hampton, N. H., home of Miss Laura C. Lamprey, teacher in Melrose, Mass., when the news came that she was one of the lucky ones to go on the Grand Tour, and they all join her in sending sincere thanks to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN."

Last night the transportation for the teachers who leave Thursday was sent out with the little souvenir booklet which has been prepared for the teachers, giving the daily itinerary of each trip.

To-day there will be mailed checks to those who won the cash consolation prizes.

As a last word of advice, be at the wharf in ample time, those of you who are going on the Grand and European tours. The Arabic sails promptly at 9:30 Thursday morning. Have your baggage plainly marked. Those of you who live at a distance must be sure to get to Boston on time.

LONGWORTHS MAKE BRILLIANT LONDON SEASON

Duke of Manchester Scores Success at Dinner for Distinguished Visitors.

PRAISE AMERICAN'S BRIDE

LONDON, July 3.—The luncheon at Blenheim House, given by the Duke of Manchester in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, is conceded among the most successful affairs during the very friendly rivalry of English notables in entertaining the distinguished visitors. After the luncheon the Longworths visited Oxford in the Duke of Manchester's motor car and then went to London, accompanied by Ambassador and Mrs. Reid, to a dinner and dance given by Lady Dartmouth.

The Duke of Manchester's American wife hails from Cincinnati, which is Mr. Longworth's home city. Helena Zimmerman, now the Duchess of Manchester, moved in the same social set with the Congressman.

Mrs. Longworth has been one of the most conspicuous figures during the busy social season. If prejudice had been excited by newspaper exaggerations of her wedding, it was dispelled as soon as she was seen in London, for she commands respect by her distinction of bearing and admiration by her charm and vivacity. Her frank enjoyment of great social functions in London and of brilliant assemblages at Ascot pleased all who met her, and her dignity and quiet manners denote consciousness of her position as the daughter of the President.

She has been a notable republican figure during a year when one of Queen Victoria's granddaughters has been married in Madrid and another crowned in Norway, and she has helped to save the London season from the reproach of being dull and uneventful.

This is a great summer resort in Canton, 14 miles out. The Electric Road has a magnificent grove, hotel, pavilion and bath houses there. It is the most beautiful lake, spring water, clear as crystal, great fishing, bass, perch, pickerel, &c. On this land is a beautiful grove, high bluffs and gentle shores. The most sightly points will be worth a fortune in a few years. In my grove stands a great monolith, the Indian god Maniton, as legend tells, and close by the high altar of Manu is the grave of a great Indian Chief. In the woods are great granite crags towering above the trees and commanding a grand view of hill and dale and lake and shore. Here you can, with the material on the ground, build a rustic log cabin or a stone castle. These lots will make a big profit for you, as there is a great demand for water fronts and no supply. The Harvard-Yale Boat Race—Its Lesson Ambition Is the Greatest Incentive to Effort. When Will Grown Men Love the Nation as the Boy Loves His College?

Excited girls and boys and older people watched the Harvard-Yale boat race last Thursday. In each of the two boats eight young giants struggled, encouraged and directed by a tiny human being in the stern of the boat yelling supplication at them through a megaphone.

Great crowds screeched on the river banks, and louder screeching came from the whistles of yachts and tugs.

On both sides of the river big locomotives, lazily, leisurely puffing as they hauled heavy trains, mocked with their steam power the tiny power of the human body.

Each great engine hauled without effort thirty carloads of shouting, jumping human beings, and each engine, with its great load, held back that it might not outstrip the little, swinging human bodies in the light shells on the water.

What were the thoughts of the excited thousands who watched the well-trained young men struggling inch by inch in that long race of four miles?

Did they think of the power of IMAGINATION as displayed in their own persons?

Those who watched the race, quivering with emotion, hearts beating, eyes bright, voices tired with prolonged shouting, COULD ACTUALLY SEE ALMOST NOTHING.

Out on the water in the bright sunlight they could just distinguish two little, pointed pink racing machines, with tiny figures gliding back and forth, bending up and down to the movement of the oars. It was like two lead pencils painted pink, moving slowly side by side for a distance of four miles. THAT WAS ALL THEIR EYES SAW.

But their IMAGINATION saw the race. They saw those eight young men at the culminating point of their youthful lives. They saw the intense effort, the physical suffering overcome by courage, the desperate urging of the tiny coxswain, the hope of the thousands of young men in the colleges. That race was seen by the crowd in THEIR IMAGINATION ONLY.

How many realized, as they watched, THE PART THAT IMAGINATION PLAYS IN OUR MINDS AND IN OUR INTELLECT?

How many reflected upon the importance of developing imagination in children, of keeping it alive in the adult human being? How many realized the part that imagination plays in the mind of man looking upon the wonders of the world, speculating upon the possibility of improving civilization, following the wonderful movements of the distant sun of our universe?

How many, as they watched that race, as they saw the young men use up every ounce of power FOR ABSOLUTELY NO REWARD BUT THE REWARD OF AMBITION GRATIFIED, realized how much is yet to be done by appealing to man's higher nature?

Every one of the young men in that boat would gladly have died to win that race. Any one of hundreds of young men on the banks would have sacrificed his life to have his side win.

Yet THERE WAS FINANCIAL PROFIT FOR NOBODY IN THAT STRUGGLE.

When will the grown men of this nation show a devotion to their country such as the boy in college shows to his alma mater? When will thinking men have for their fellow beings all over this earth the feeling of loyalty, OF SOLIDARITY, that animates the college boy in his relations with the boys in his college?

Thus far in human history men have carried on their enterprises UPON A BASIS OF CUTTHROAT COMPETITION. Each has tried to get the better of the other, to build up his own fortune at the other's expense.

Lately we have replaced competition WITH ORGANIZATION. A few of the powerful and intelligent have got together. They have combined against all the others as trusts, and have easily overcome them and put them down.

We have passed from competition to organization. WHEN SHALL WE PASS FROM SELFISH ORGANIZATION TO UNSELFISH EMULATION?

Do you realize how different this world will be when the grown man shall feel for his native country, for all his fellow beings, that devotion and reverence which the college boy feels for his college and for the boys of his college?

When government ownership is talked of the cynical man declares that under government ownership the nation will be robbed.

"It is human nature to take advantage," they say, "it is human nature for a man to take life easily if he has a chance, and not to work honestly for his money. It is human nature to dodge duty, it is human nature to be faithless," etc., etc.

That is false.

IT IS HUMAN NATURE TO BE LOYAL, IF YOU GIVE A MAN THE PROPER INCENTIVE.

Take the young men who raced in those two boats. For six months they have been in training. For six months they have been on their honor to eat and drink only under the direction of the man in charge of them.

EVERY MAN OF THEM HAS DONE HIS DUTY. NOT ONE HAS "BROKEN TRAINING."

These young men have willingly, loyally denied themselves—saved all their vitality and force to uphold the honor of their college.

The cynic might say: "It is human nature for the young man to eat if he feels like it, dissipate if he feels like it, to drink and stay up late."

But if anybody said that of the young man at college he would be ignorant. For it is human nature to obey, first of all, the promptings of AMBITION.

And our nation will be faithfully served when we shall succeed in making the average citizen take in his own country and its service the pride which the half-developed young man takes in the college that gives him his education.

On that river race course well-trained young men—splendid object lessons in self-denial—strained themselves to the last degree, with no hope of financial reward, WITH NO INCENTIVE WHATEVER SAVE THE INCENTIVE OF AN HONORABLE, UNSELFISH AMBITION.

Does anybody believe that grown men are incapable of the honorable inspiration that animates the half-grown boy?

Does anybody doubt that in time the whole race of human beings will work for each other loyally, unselfishly, as they now work in their separate little organizations, colleges, clubs, etc.?

19 DAYS have elapsed since the BOSTON AMERICAN filed with the Attorney-General a formal information and petition to bring suit to force the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Albany Railroad to obey the law and to abandon the competing trolley lines which they have illegally acquired.

Why does the Attorney-General delay?

A Midsummer Day's Dream

By Wex Jones

DEAR MERMAID free, from the deep, cool sea,
Won't you stay ashore and change with me?
Oh, come to the heat of the breathless street,
And let me dive to your dim retreat—
Though here, my dear, I fear, my dear,
You'd find out ways amazing queer,
With our landmaids cinched in corsets pinched
Till even an eel had winced and flinched;
And our landmen strangled in collars fangled
To cut their necks where the things are angled—
All jammed in flats like burrowing rats,
And the open air left to birds and bats.

SO, Mermaid, please, let us find the seas,
Where you never swelter and never freeze,
Where this mad July may frizzle by
As in glaucous coolth we lazily lie,
As I tell the crabs they should ride in cabs,
And call the elegant flounder "Slab!"
And hear the tales of the travelled whales,
And learn to what port the nautilus sails,
And hourly swell the ocean knell
For good sailors drowned—"Hark!—Ding, dong, bell."
—No mermaid there? This dopey air
Gives one midsummer fancies and dreams for fair!

PERCY TRIED TO BE A HERO, BUT HE TACKLED THE WRONG MAN

Togging Up Our Soldier Boys

By Winifred Black

TURN out the electric lights; let's go back to candles.

Take the street cars off the tracks; what we want are stage coaches. Throw down your guns, boys, they're not picturesque; what you need is a lance or a pike or a cross-bow or anything else that's old-fashioned and clumsy and foolish and out of date.

An English military tailor is coming to tell Uncle Sam's soldiers how to dress. Who ever heard of anything so absurd? What the English military tailor doesn't know about the art of modern military dress can never be printed—it would make too large a book.

He's all right to dress up a lot of funny little manikins in scarlet cloth and postage stamp caps to look pretty in a parade, but when it comes to dressing a soldier, man fashion, with comfy clothes to fight in, he is absolutely at sea.

Did you ever see a lot of Tommy Atkinses out for an afternoon walk?

I couldn't believe they were true the first time I looked at them; they were so pinched in and padded out and squeezed together and puffed up that they didn't look like anything in the world, but funny little stuffed dolls.

And their caps—there never was anything so absolutely ridiculous as an English soldier's cap.

It doesn't keep his head warm or dry or cool.

It doesn't shade his eyes or protect the back of his neck or do anything that a soldier's head covering ought to do.

He might just as well pick a four-leafed clover and stick it on his head for luck, for all the good his cap does.

And over the edge of that cap he wears curls—curling-iron curls, mind you—and in his hand he carries a silly little switch; and this is the man that our boys in khaki are going to be made to imitate—save the mark!

If the English Government wants to do something for the English army, here's a nice, simple, easy way to do it:

Send over here and get a good, sensible American military tailor to run over to Aldershot and show them how a soldier should dress. We don't want soldiers to look pretty, we want them to fight; and anything that makes a man uncomfortable hurts his fighting power.

An English tailor! Tut, tut! It is to laugh. I don't believe a word of it; do you?

Beware of the Village Gossip

By Rev. A. E. George

PEOPLE who can afford it are buying small farms near a large city. This is going on in Boston, and as time advances, it will be more and more the correct thing to do for the man of moderate means.

Locating in a small country town and doing business in a city has its disadvantages. Village life has one tantalizing microbe. You don't find it in the large life of a city, but you run across it in the small area of a country town.

People in the village never mind their own business. The newcomer is subjected to all sorts of examination by his neighbors. His family is marked and watched. They will be uneasy but persistent in knowing how the head of the family makes his living.

But they don't stop when this knowledge is gained. If he has girls they will be critically looked over and their dresses and general make-up will afford material for gossip.

Your determination to keep yourself in such a place and mind your own business does not change the situation. If you carry a bag to and from the city, your neighbors will move heaven and earth to find out what you are carrying in it.

If you are a lawyer and they are satisfied that your "briefs" are in it, it may relieve their anxiety for a time. But if you are an ordinary business man, their curiosity will haunt you though you dodge their inquisitiveness in this particular.

The newcomer into the village life must be oppressed by the amount of gossip he hears, and by the amount which his own family inspires. You can't avoid this incessant clap-trap.

There are always certain people in every village who manufacture falsehoods out of whole cloth, who live upon a cold-storage imagination, putting this thing and that thing together, this incident and the other, and keeping them together till they can spin out some "yarn" about you and your family.

You may be the most innocent and close-mouthed individual in the world, but this does not matter.

The gossips in a village are well trained. They have been too long in the business to let anyone escape their sting. Your wife, your children will have many a trying moment, if they are at all sensitive.

Village life would be simply ideal, if it were not for this microbe.

You can't get used to it and let the tongues wag. Try as you will, it is always an irritant, because you never know what shape it will assume or what falsehood it will champion.

It takes a long residence in the country to get inured to it; even then you are afraid of it at stated intervals.

The worst thing in modern village life is not the dog grass in your plowed field, or the vermin on your chickens, or the bug on the potato vines, or the worm that gnaws your cabbage plant. You dose these and keep them at bay. But a village gossip no one can tame. It is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison and often takes the shine out of the beauties of nature.
